Truman Asks Fact-Finding Strike Board To End Crisis

Sets Up Two Units In Motor and Steel Disputes; CIO Calls Meeting on Proposal

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Truman yesterday asked Congress for immediate legislation for handling major strikes through special fact-finding boards. Without waiting for authorization, however, he set up two such boards to tackle the most immediate strike problems, in General Motors and the United States Steel Corp.

In Detroit, striking United Auto Workers scheduled a mass meeting for Saturday to consider Mr. Truman's request that they return to work while the board studies the case and makes its recommendations.

The heads of GM and "Big Steel" meantime withheld comment on the President's proposal until they studied it more thoroughly.

Labor Appears Opposed

Generally, the reactions of union labor were in strong opposition to the President's scheme. William Green, AFL president, stated flatly his organization could not approve the suggested legislation and that he thought it would be "unacceptable to labor." Officials of the United Mine Workers and the CIO declined to comment for the record, but there was no doubt of their opposition. On Capitol Hill, however, the suggestion received generally favorable comment.

In a special message sent to Congress at noon yesterday, the President pointed to the failure of the recent Labor-Management Conference to agree on machinery which would handle disputes after bargaining and conciliation had broken down. Accordingly, he said, "It becomes the duty of the Government to act on its own initiative."

Short-Term Plan

For the short term, the President's immediate actions were:

1. Creation of a fact-finding board, presumably of three men whose names have not yet been announced, to consider the GM case, and an appeal to the workers to return to their jobs at once and to the company to "proceed energetically with full production."

2. Creation of a similar board, the members of which were also not announced, for the threatened strike in United States Steel, and

Union Leaders Hit Truman's GM Proposal

Detroit, Dec. 3 (AP).—Three CIO union leaders expressed dissatisfaction today with President Truman's proposal for ending the General Motors strike but said his appeal for a return to work by 225,000 workers would be submitted to strikers' representatives.

R. J. Thomas, United Automobile Workers (CIO) international president, said a conference of 250 leaders of GM local unions would be summoned to meet here Saturday to consider the President's request.

Thomas, Vice President Walter P. Reuther and Secretary Treasurer George F. Addes of the union told a press conference they personally would not be in favor of a return to work now, but Thomas said:

"The workers will vote the way they want to. Ours is the most Democratic union in the world."

The presidential intervention in the strike of UAW-CIO members seeking to enforce their demands on General Motors for a 30 per cent wage increase within present price structures highlighted a day which also saw these developments:

1. The union asked the Justice Department to investigate General Motors with a view to anti-trust proceedings based on control of a large part of the automobile industry's supply of engine fuel pumps.

2. Thomas denied authorship of a letter issued by his publicity department last Saturday, which

Curtailment of Jail Recreation Ordered as Girl, 17, Is Arrested

WHEN A CELL IS HOME—H. B. Gill (left), general superintendent of the District Jail, and Arthur H. Farley, deputy superintendent at Lorton, temporarily assigned to the jail as Gill's assistant, confer in the cell that Gill has taken as his quarters. Both officials will live at the jail and be on duty 24 hours a day

BULLETIN

Squads of detectives and police lead by Col. Edward J. Kelly, chief of police, surrounded the District jail shortly after 8 p. m. last night while policemen and detectives entered to make a thorough search of the jail.

Sharp curtailment of activities at the District jail "not essential to safe custody" was ordered yesterday by the Board of Public Welfare following arrest of a 17-year-old girl charged with smuggling four hacksaws to prisoners a month prior to the November 24 jail-break.

In reply, Howard B. Gill, general superintendent of District prisons, said he had "curtailed to the limit" and declared the Welfare Board would have to clarify its orders.

Mystery surrounding the break by five prisoners reached the boiling point last night with further arrests expected momentarily as a result of these fast-breaking developments:

1. Mrs. Catherine Elizabeth Davis, 17, of 724 9th st. se., wife of a jail inmate, was booked on a charge of prison breach in connection with the hacksaws.

2. A jail "trusty" was held in solitary confinement as the man who picked up the saws and delivered them to prisoners.

3. The Welfare Board, after ordering Gill to virtually cease welfare and recreation activities for jail prisoners, held a closed meeting with District Commissioners.

4. The FBI, with Philadelphia and New Jersey police, joined in a search for Michael J. Quinn, one of the escaped prisoners, in attempts to link him with a shotgun slaying Friday night in Camden, N. J.

5. Gill, taking up residence in a District Jail cell, foresaw further arrests with the statement that "there are other suspects both inside and outside the jail whom we want to investigate."

With arrest of the girl, the Board of Public Welfare called a meeting which members said was designed to seek "immediate methods" for correcting the situation at the District jail.

"Any activity which detracts prison employes from their primary duty of safeguarding prisoners must be curtailed, such as the jail canteen and the recreation program," Raymond F. Clapp, principal assistant to Welfare Director Ray L. Huff, said in explaining the Board's brief announcement. The announcement:

"The Board of Public Welfare instructed the general superintendent of penal institutions, at its

Court-Martial Of Capt. M'Vay Delayed Day

Adjournment Asked On Grounds of Time To Prepare Defense

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer.

The Navy court-martial trying Capt. Charles B. McVay 3d on charges of "negligence" and "culpable inefficiency" growing out of loss of the cruiser Indianapolis was adjourned yesterday until 10 a. m. today at McVay's request.

The accused officer asked adjournment on the ground that he had received the charges and specifications only last Thursday and had not had time to prepare a defense. McVay's counsel said he would be ready for trial today.

May Question Crew

Conviction, a Navy spokesman said, could result in dismissal of McVay, a veteran of 26 years' service, including sea duty in both World Wars. A jail sentence could also be imposed, he said, but "is not customary."

He revealed also that McVay did not request the court-martial.

It was understood that 15 officers and about 20 enlisted men, presumably in large part from the ship's crew, would be called by the prosecution. Experts on ship construction and on explosives also are expected to be questioned.

Adjournment yesterday followed a brief legal tilt when McVay objected to the specification supporting the charge of negligence. The court, consisting of one admiral, two commodores and three captains, filed into a consultation room where they considered the objection and then filed out to turn it down.

2nd Charge Accepted

McVay's counsel, Capt. John P. Cady, argued that the specification, which sets forth that McVay failed to "because a zigzag course to be steered" during "good visibility after moonrise" in "an area in which enemy submarine might be encountered" did not state an offense. The specification, he said, "merely sets out as a fact a conclusion of the pleader" and contains "no averment that the accused had knowledge of the facts stated."

He made no objection to the

His Most Infamous Act

Hitler Plotted Attack on Czechs While Denying Worldly Claims

Nuernberg, Germany, Dec. 3 (AP).—An American prosecutor today laid bare before the international war crimes tribunal Hitler's most infamous act of treachery—how he told the world he had no more territorial claims and at the same time secretly planned to attack Czechoslovakia.

Unfolding the "inside story" of the Munich Pact, Sidney S. Alderman, assistant United States prosecutor, pointed to the 20 solemn Nazi leaders and declared the Munich agreement "was a trap set by these people who are here on trial."

Step by step he traced the historic four-power meeting at Munich in September, 1938, then the German occupation of the Sudetenland and finally the seizure of Moravia and Bohemia.

Nazi documents showed that one month after the occupation of Austria in March, 1938, Hitler and Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel met to discuss a "pretext" for the invasion of Czechoslovakia and that from then on plans went forward, despite Hitler's pious assertions and his signature of the Munich Pact on September 30, 1938.

A directive from Hitler dated May 30, 1938, opened with the words: "It is my unalterable decision to smash Czechoslovakia by

Pearl Harbor Cited to Spur Unification

Intelligence Unit's Failure to Function Recalled byGen. Miles To Probe Committee

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer.

Failure of a joint Army-Navy intelligence committee to function before the war was cited yesterday by Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, the Army's pre-Pearl Harbor intelligence chief, as one of the best arguments for unification of command.

Miles told the Joint Congressional Committee Investigating Pearl Harbor that he and Rear Admiral Theodore S. Wilkinson, chief of Naval Intelligence, were the two member of the committee which was answerable to the joint board.

Main official reason ascribed for failure of the committee to function between October 11 and December 8, 1941, was that no suitable place could be found for the members to meet.

Representative John W. Murphy (D., Pa.) pressed Miles to explain why it was so difficult to find a place for a two-man committee to meet.

"Couldn't you two meet in your office," Murphy asked.

Miles disclosed that there were questions of high policy involved. Lieut. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow and Vice Admiral Richmond K. Turner, who represented the joint board, were engaged in a controversy, Miles said, about whether the joint intelligence committee would interpret facts or just report on the facts themselves.

The October 11 meeting was the only one held before Pearl Harbor, Miles testified, despite the fact that the Secretaries of War and Navy had issued orders to set up the joint committee about the first of October.

Unification of command would have prevented that situation, Miles insisted, and added that he had always been in favor of unifying command of the armed forces.

World Secret Service Urged

Miles advocated the establishment of a permanent world-wide secret service for the United States, comparable to that maintained by other major powers.

"Such a service is a necessity to our national defense at all times," he declared under the questioning of Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.).

Before the war Japan and other major powers had world-wide espionage services, tremendous in scope, numbers and financial backing, Miles said.

"We had one," he said, "but only in a very small way and we kept it aboveboard, too."

Committee members did not press him to explain what advantage, if any, had been derived from the "aboveboard" conduct of the military intelligence service.

The intelligence service would have to be linked to the armed forces in order to function efficiently, Miles asserted.

Murphy commented that inasmuch as Miles had testified that any message of warning sent to Pearl Harbor after Gen. George C. Marshall sent his alert November 27 was "redundant" even the Navy would not have received its further warnings if al lintelligence were under one head.

Earlier Miles had told the committee that the reply of Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short, Army commander at Pearl Harbor, to the warning

Senate Defeats Treaty Status For UNO Pact

Vote of 57 to 14 Rejects Jurisdiction Over Armed Quotas

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday renounced any exclusive "treaty" jurisdiction over the United Nations' forthcoming armed quota agreement, rejecting 57 to 14 a move to require Senate ratification of world policing arrangements.

The vote cleared the way for Senate passage probably today of the Administration's United Nations bill, underwriting United States obligations in the new world league.

Sitting past the dinner hour, the Senate rejected these other attempts to amend the legislation:

1. Defeated 46 to 17 an amendment by Senator Eugene D. Milliken (D., Colo.), denying special diplomatic rank to the United States representative on the Security Council.

Millikin Defeated Twice

2. Defeated 31 to 27 another amendment by Millikin to make the five United States posts on the General Assembly full-time jobs, subject to Senate confirmation, and paying $12,000 annually.

The Administration leadership had its closest call on the General Assembly amendment. Proponents of the change accused the Foreign Relations Committee of "down-

'Chain Reaction' Broken

Scientists Were Ready to Die To Stop Blast in 1st Bomb Test

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP).—Because it was not positively known whether the first atomic bomb experiment would start a "chain reaction" difficult to stop, a group of scientists stood ready to sacrifice their lives if necessary to avert an explosion, a scientist said today.

Dr. Walter H. Zinn, who built the first atomic pile on the University of Chicago's football field, said there was a "one in a million chance" that the reaction would be so rapid as to threaten an explosion.

If that one chance occurred, he added, a squad of men was on hand to quench the atomic fire with a special unidentified liquid. They were not certain they would not be killed in the process, he said.

The pile, he told a group of visiting 4-H contest winners, consisted of blocks of uranium and graphite. When the metal rods were withdrawn, the reaction began, "with constantly increasing rapidity." Then came the test—when the "control" rods were pushed back into the pile, the chain reaction stopped.

"We all breathed a sigh of relief," he stated.

The 4-H champions, winners in the group's Westinghouse Electric championship, were the first students to visit the site of the original pile since the project's start at the war's beginning.

Police Raid $10,000-a-Day Gaming Den

Cab Driver, Grocer And Clerk Held as Fairmont Street House Is Closed

Three men were arrested when police broke into what they said was a $10,000-a-day gambling headquarters at 1445 Fairmont st. nw., at about 5 p. m. yesterday.

Held without charge were Nick Smyrnas, 31, a cab driver, of 6111 54th ave., Riverdale, Md., who had $229 in his pockets; his brother, Theodore Smyrnas, 32, a grocer, of 4325 47th st. nw., who had $1591 in his possession, and Frank M. Lane, 32, a clerk, of 1235 Randolph st. nw., who had $53 on his person.

The raid was made by Inspector Oscar J. Letterman and Dectective Sergts. Howard Ogle and Paul H. Clarke. They said the place had been under observation for the past two months.

Bet on Horses and Numbers

Police said the headquarters was located on the fourth floor of a rooming house at the Fairmont st. address and that the three men were the only ones there at the time the raid was made.

The place, according to police, handled bets on horses, numbers and football pools.

Police said it contained about $5000 worth of equipment, including a Western Union ticker, an intercommunications system, four telephones and indirect lighting.

Police met no resistance when they walked in. They said they seized racing form sheets, an undetermined amount of money and a large quantity of numbers slips. In a table drawer, they said, they discovered a .32-caliber revolver.

Police said that during the raid the telephones continued to ring with callers telephoning in bets. They said they "accepted" several hundred dollars' worth of bets while they were there.

'Red' Pickets Ask Ouster Of Byrnes

PARADE—Placards demanding the resignation of Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, withdrawal of American forces in China and stoppage of aid to Chiang Kai-shek were carried yesterday by Communist Party pickets in front of the State Department

By John F. Gerrity
Post Staff Writer

The D. C. Communist Party yesterday picketed the State Department under its own name, taking what one of its spokesmen described as a new "independent" policy.

Four noon to 1 p. m. pickets—designed to catch the "lunch hour" trade"—demanded the ouster of Secretary James F. Byrnes and the immediate return from China of American marines and other troops. Pickets will continue today and tomorrow, it is expected. Local party leaders will submit a petition to the White House tomorrow.

Chairman Elizabeth Searle of the local party described the petition as the "first independent action taken by an aggressive rejuvenated party since VJ-Day."

It will demand that the United States discontinue its present "imperialist policies in China and return to the principles embodied in the Potsdam Treaty."

"The local party welcomed the resignation of Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley," Miss Searle said. "Secretary Byrnes is even more to blame than Ambassador Hurley regarding China."

Miss Searle said the State Department picketing is one of 500 Nation-wide party rallies and demonstrations.

"Our picketing is in line with National Party's aim to correct faults in policy which characterized the passivity of the Browder regime. Browder's leadership was repudiated at our July conference," she said.

It is expected that there will be further picketing in Washington from time to time.

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—President Truman's message to Congress on the solution of labor disputes buoyed the stock market today and leading aviations, motors, steels and issues of other companies faced with strikes and wage controversies rose $1 to around $5 a share on one of the largest volumes since last June. Some hesitancy prevailed among rails and scattered pivotals at the close.

Committee Approves Measure

UNRRA Appropriation Bill Goes to House Tomorrow

The bill providing a second $1,350,000,000 authorization for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration will be placed before the House Wednesday, Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.), said yesterday.

The House Rules Committee approved the measure for floor action. At the same time it specified that an amendment banning UNRRA aid to countries denying United States reporters free access to UNRRA news, could be introduced.

The House recently attached a similar amendment to a 550-million dollar UNRRA appropriation, but it was killed in the Senate Appropriations Committee.

At the Rules Committee meeting, Representative Cox (D., Ga.) asserted that "every dime" spent by UNRRA is "furthering the cause of Communism."

Cox made the statement after Chairman Bloom (D., N. Y.) asked right of way for the bill.

Cox said, "I have no objection to the purpose for which UNRRA was created, but I haven't the slightest confidence in the set that is doing the job."

Bloom replied that UNRRA had made some mistakes in the past

Reds Find It 'Not Possible' To Agree to Jan. 1 Limit

Soviet, British Still Committed to Leave By March 2; Yanks Out by New Year's

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer.

Russia has turned down the American proposal that all Big Three troops be withdrawn from Iran by January 1, it was announced at the State Department last night.

In making the proposal 10 days ago to Moscow and London, the United States acted on reports that armed uprisings had broken out in northern Iran, that Iranian government troops had been dispatched to the scene to restore order, but that the Red Army forces in northern Iran would not let them move into the zone of trouble.

The United States, in its note, said that if all American, British and Russian troops were withdrawn by January 1, it would remove the likelihood of "incidents and misunderstandings" and fulfill the Big Three's pledge at Tehran to recognize "the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iran."

Michael J. McDermott, special assistant to the Secretary of State, announced last night that the Soviet Union in its reply had implied that it does not find it possible to accede to the American request to withdraw all troops by January 1.

Contents Not Released

McDermott did not give out the contents of the Russian note, explaining that arrangements had not yet been made with Moscow for its release.

He said Russia's rejection of the American proposal did not "change the fact that Russia and Britain are committed by their dual pact with Iran to evacuate troops from Iran by March 2."

The United States is going ahead with plans to withdraw all of its troops by the New Year. These already have been reduced from 28,000 to less than 6000, none of them combat troops. The Yanks were sent into Iran to speed up the movement of lend-lease supplies from the Persian Gulf into Russia.

The Red Army troops are in northern Iran, a Russian "sphere of influence" since far back into Czarist days. The Iranian Government has urgently petitioned Moscow to permit Iranian troops to go into the north and restore order. The Russians have refused, saying that their presence would cause further fighting and bloodshed.

U. S. Observers Return

Three American observers who were ordered by the State Department to go into the north have returned to Teheran. They said that Iranians favoring autonomy for the northern province of Azerbaijan had established roadblocks outside the city of Tabriz, and were demanding identity cards of all travelers except Soviet military officials. They estimated the number of "tourists" in Azerbaijan at 2000. The Iranians have charged that these were let in by the Russians.

Iran Ready to Talk

Tehran, Iran, Dec. 3 (AP).—The Iranian government told Russia today that it would be willing "to meet the legitimate people" in troubled Azerbaijan Province, presumably to discuss demands for local autonomy, as soon as order is restored.

The government's offer, considered by some cabinet members as inauguration of an appeasement policy, was made in a note replying to a Russian refusal to permit Iranian reinforcements in the province on the ground that their presence would cause further fighting and bloodshed.

This conciliatory tone, coupled with the replacement of Tehran's mayor, Chulan Hussian Ebterhaj, by Mahmud Nahriman, described as a Soviet sympathizer, was seen by some government members as a definite swing toward appeasement.

They expressed fears that any show of weakness might result in demands which would push the country "slowly but surely under the influence of a foreign power."

LABOR

an appeal to the workers to stay on their jobs pending a report of the board's findings and recommendations.

For the future, the President asked Congressional enactment "as quickly as possible—certainly before its Christmas recess" of legislation following the principles of the Railway Labor Act.

This would authorize the President or his agent to appoint special boards of three or more "outstanding citizens" to investigate the facts, subpena such individuals and records as they needed, and make findings and recommendations. During a period of 30 days, it would be unlawful to call a strike or lockout or make any changes in the conditions of work in the company involved.

Facts Would Be Known

The board's recommendations would not be binding, but, the President said, through the work of the board, "the general public would know all the facts."

"The result, I am sure, would be that in most cases, both sides would accept the recommendations, as they have in most of the railway labor disputes," he explained.

The system would be used sparingly, the President said, only in major industries and major disputes, when the Secretary of Labor would certify that a stoppage in the industry would vitally affect national public interest.

Limits Application

The general pattern of the Railway Labor Act, Mr. Truman commented, is not applicable to small industries or small local disputes. He said that even in disputes in major industries, if the quarrel was inconsequential, the fact-finding procedure should not be tried.

In a major dispute where collective bargaining and conciliation failed, and where the sides refused to agree to voluntary arbitration, the system would work as follows:

1. The Secretary of Labor would certify the dispute to the President, who would appoint a fact-finding board within five days.

2. During these five days it would be unlawful to call a strike or lockout or to change rates of pay, hours or working conditions.

3. The board would make a thorough investigation and within 20 days—unless a longer time is agreed upon by the parties and the President—make a report including a finding of facts and "such recommendations as the board deems appropriate."

4. While the board is deliberating and for five days thereafter, it would be unlawful to strike or change the conditions of labor in the company affected, unless such a change is by agreement.

Industry May Oppose It

Mr. Truman's recommendation is expected to provoke management opposition. Industry has recently indicated its strong opposition to public examination of company books and records. The President asked that these be made available to fact-finding boards by subpoena, if necessary.

First congressional reaction came from Senator Robert A. Taft, (R., Ohio). He said that "however desirable fact-finding machinery may be, the people should know that it will not prevent strikes or violence." He said it must be used on a company, not an industry-wide basis.

Taft recalled that in December, 1941, he and Senator Joseph H. Ball, R., Minn.), proposed legislation for fact-finding machinery, but that "it was blocked by the administration at that time and ever since."

"It is gratifying," he said, "that President Truman has reversed this position."

Ball said that Mr. Truman's message "is the most hopeful word I've seen on this particular front in a long time—I hope we can continue expeditiously on this legislation."

This sentiment was echoed by Senators Clyde M. Reed, (R., Kans.), and Kenneth S. Wherry, (R., Neb.)

Plan Draws Praise

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who originally suggested the labor-management conference, had this comment to make to newsmen on the President's message:

"So far, so good. But it seems to me the President has ignored in his recommendations the necessity of finding some way in which to guarantee mutual responsibility in collective bargaining contracts."

Senator George (D., Ga.), called the President's proposal "a partial approach."

"It may be a good first step," he said in an interview, "but it is sort of nibbling at the general problem instead of taking hold of it firmly."

More drastic legislation was introduced by Senator Moore (R. Okla.). He said it would "place industry and labor on even terms," and told the Senate it would:

Prohibit industry-wide collective bargaining, permit recovery of damages by persons injured by strikes called in violation of law, withhold unemployment compensation benefits from strikers, make unions subject to antitrust laws and the act on corrupt political practices, require annual audits of union funds and make unlawful the closed shop or union shop.

Called Anti-Labor

"Definitely anti-labor" was the comment of Representative Marcantonio (Amn. Lab., N. Y.) on the President's message.

The New Yorker told the House the President was "taking sides in the dispute between the United Automobile Workers and General Motors by asking the workers to return."

If approved by Congress, he said, the President's plan "would deprive workers of the right to strike by invoking compulsory arbitration."

Representative Arends of Illinois, Republican whip, said he was "glad the President has recognized the seriousness of the situation and that something must be done in a legislative way to cope with the problems of labor and management."

Dutra, Gomes Hold Big Lead In Brazil Vote

Rio De Janeiro, Dec. 3 (AP).—Army General Eurico Dutra, backed by former President Getulio Vargas, took an early lead today over three opponents in returns from Sunday's presidential elections, the first in 15 years.

Dutra and Air General Eduardo Gomes, leader of the anti-Vargas forces, were easily outdistancing their civilian opponents.

Returns from 10 states gave Dutra 7484 votes; Gomes, 5226; Yeddo Fiuza, communist, 2324; and Mario Rollim Telles, Agrarian, 40.

Gomes held the lead in six states, which have a total of 1,564,924 registered voters, while Dutra led in four states with a registered vote of 3,895,613. From 75 to 90 per cent of all the nation's voters went to the polls.

Marshall message was "totally inadequate."

Miles was asked by Representative J. Bayard Clark (D., N. C.), why a further warning stressing the seriousness of the situation had not been sent General Short when he replied that he had given orders for the command to be alerted against sabotage.

Miles replied that the question should be answered by the only three who saw Short's reply, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, and General Gerow, assistant chief of staff in charge of war plans.

Short Tightens Lips

He contended, however, that the one warning of November 27 should have been sufficient and that Short should have alerted his command against all possible contingencies.

As he discussed the warning messages, Short, sitting at a counsel table only a few feet away, turned several times and watched the witness, his lips tightened in a grim line.

Later when Miles faced a battery of questions from Murphy over the failure of his own estimates on the war situation to mention Pearl Harbor, and showed his discomforture, Short smiled.

Short Grins, Miles Hesitates

"What disturbs me," snapped Murphy, "is that I certainly get the impression from your testimony that you were probably the only person in Washington who expected an attack at Pearl Harbor and yet when I go through your own reports at that time I find no mentio nof Pearl Harbor or Hawaii."

Short grinned and Miles hesitated. Finally, Miles explained that although he had believed an attack "inherent in the situation," he did not believe it was possible because he had given the Japanese too much credit for "goo dsense."

Earlier, Miles admitted that the success of the Japanese attack had depended in very large measure upon the Japs ability to catch the fleet unalerted and therefore unprepared.

"Question of Alertness"

"Then it comes down to a question of alertness, doesn't it?" Representative Clark asked.

Representative Bertrand Gearhart (R., Calif.) took much the same line of attack as to whether the Marshall message had sufficiently alerted Hawaii and whether Short's reply mentioning only alertness against sabotage had been properly evaluated.

Two of three War Department chiefs who read the Short message are expected to testify this week. Chairman Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) announced that General Marshall would testify at 10 a. m., Thursday morning. General Gerow is expected to follow Miles, who has been testifying for three days.

grading" the assembly in the enabling statute, and bipartisan support developed for permanent assebly jobs.

The fight to designate the forthcoming military quota agreement a "treaty," subject to Senate two-thirds vote ratification, was led by Senator Forrest C. Donnell, (R., Mo.), who for nearly three days had held the floor.

As submitted to the Senate, the bill empowers the President to negotiate agreements on quotas putting armed teeth in Security Council decisions to use force to keep the peace. Under the bill the agreement would be submitted to Congress as ordinary legislation, subject to a simple majority vote would in fact be a treaty, and as in both houses.

Donnell insisted the agreement such subject to exclusive Senate actrion. Since the Senate jealousy guards its treaty-ratifying prerogatives, leaders feared Donnell would run up a big vote. They were mistaken. Only one Democrat (Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Mont.), and 13 Republicans, supported his amendment.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) clinched the case for majority congressional action on armed quotas when he told the Senate approval of the agreement by both houses "is strictly a constitutional process."

special meeting today at 3 p. m., at once to curtail activities at the jail not essential to safe custody and to procedures to fit personnel available."

Gill said he did not know what the Board meant by "curtailed activities," pointing out all annual leaves at the jail have been canceled and that all available personnel were working overtime.

Menwhile, Mrs. Davis was being held at the Metropolitan Police Women's Bureau pending release on bond.

She was booked yesterday at police headquarters by Detective Sergts. Nunzio Bonnacorrsy and Joseph Hunt, who made the arrest shortly before midnight Sunday and questioned her secretly overnight.

Secreted in Magazine

Detective Lieut. Robert V. Murray said the hacksaw blades were purchased late in October from a Southeast Washington hardware store and delivered to the jail secreted in the pages of a magazine.

The magazine containing the blades was said by police to have been picked up while Mrs. Davis was visiting her husband at the jail by a trusty.

The trusty was identified by detectives as a bookkeeper for the jail canteen and was said to have had access to the various cell houses. The canteen is located in the section where visitors to the jail are seated before going into booths t otalk with prisoners via a telephone arrangement. Visitor and prisoner are separated by a glass panel.

Mrs. Davis' husband, Earl Davis, 22, was not implicated in the break, police said, although they admitted that he was to receive $300 from John Mansour, another of the escaped prisoners, in return for delivery of the hacksaw blades.

Had Juvenile Record

Davis, awaiting trial on charges of violating the National Motor Vehicle Theft Act, was sentenced to two terms of 90 days each in the District Jail in May, 1944, on charges of assault with a dangerous weapon and possessing a concealed weapon, police records showed. Police said he also had a long juvenile record.

He said the new authorization was necessary to avoid a breakdown in shipments for February.

"I told the President that it was absolutely necessary to have action on both bills before the congressional recess, or there will inevitably be a breakdown in the pipeline of supplies."

After conferring yesterday with the President, legislative leaders reported he again had made UNRRA funds a "must" before Congress recesses over Christmas.

military action in the near future. It is the job of the political leaders to bring about the politically or militarily suitable moment."

This directive was supplemented by an order fixing October 1, 1938, as the deadline for the attack.

Alderman also introduced documents showing Hungary had agreed to participation in the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia and had informed Hitler that she would be ready by October 1. The Hungarian government, Alderman disclosed, agreed after Germany told Hungary that if she wanted to take part in the "eating" of her neighbor state she would also have to participate in the "cooking"—the invasion.

The prosecutor introduced a memorandum from Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl, one of the defendants, to Hitler, dated August 24, 1938, which he said showed Jodl's complicity in "the shameful fabrication" of an "excuse for war."

Planned "Incident"

"Operation green," the memorandum said, "will be set in motion by means of an 'incident' in Czechoslovakia which will give Germany provocation for military intervention.

"It must come at a time when weather conditions are favorable for our superior air force . . . and at an hour which will enable authentic news of it to reach us."

The Munich agreement delayed the attack, but Alderman presented documents to show that the Nazi leaders never abandoned their plans to smash their little neighbor.

About three weeks after Neville Chamberlain returned from Munich to utter his famous "peace in our time" phrase, Hitler ordered the German armed forces to prepare for "the liquidation of the remainder of Czechoslovakia and the occupation of Memelland."

UNIONS

accepted a GM proposal to reopen some plants for production of parts for rival manufacturers.

3. UAW-CIO local unions in some General Motors centers expressed opposition to any partial return to work.

Thomas said only the memberships of local unions could end the strike, under the union constitution, and that their decision could not be obtained before Tuesday, December 11. Representatives at Saturday's conference here, he said, must carry recommendations to the locals for their vote.

As for himself, Thomas said, he was "not in favor" of the President's proposal, commenting that a "fact-finding" committee could easily be packed in either direction.

Reuther said if he were a GM employe "I could certainly not be willing to go to work with only the President's proposal as a basis for settling the strike," and Addes commented, "I would want something more tangible if I were voting."

Thomas said "I wonder if the President knows (1) that General Motors has not cooperated on collective bargaining; (2) that we have tried conciliation and mediation, and (3) that we have offered arbitration. We think he should know them before he sets up his fact-finding committee.

Last Saturday's letter, accepting a proposal by GM President C. E. Wilson for reopening of some parts plants, was written by his publicity department while he was on a train, Thomas said, and "the signature must have been rubber-stamped."

He said he would not have approved the letter, "didn't know" if any other union officer had approved it, and that his reply to the proposal would have been to investigate the parts plant situation which the union is now doing, and await the results before giving a definite acceptance or rejection.

second charge and specification which alleges that McVay failed, through "culpable inefficiency," to order the ship abandoned in time to avert heavy loss of life.

In response to Cady's objection to the first specification Lieut. Carl F. Bauersfeld, assistant judge advocate, argued that the specification met the requirements of Navy procedure. It is not necessary, he said, that the specification "be framed with the technical precision" of an equivalent document in civilian procedure.

Capt. Thomas J. Ryan, jr., judge advocate, sad forthcoming evidence "will show whether or not the accused knew or should have known of the facts stated in the specification."

Delivering the court's decision not to sustain the objection, Rear Admiral Wilder D. Baker, president, said it was "not necessary to submit that any Federal statute or regulation was violated." He said it was necessary only to show that the result specified was in fact due to the offense charged.

Court Gold-Braided

The members of the court, heavily gold-braided and colorful with campaign ribbons and decorations, filed into their places at 10:07.

All members of the court are regular Navy officers, as is Capt. McVay. All are superior or equal in rank.

Captain McVay, with Captain Cady and assistant counsel, Lieut. W. J. O'Donnell, USNR, and Lieut. E. M. Vollberg, USNR, sat at a table facing Admiral Baker on his left, Captain Ryan and Lieutenant Bauersfeld sat facing the president at his right. A witness table, so far unused, faced Admiral Baker directly to his front.

McVay, who is 47 and lives at 2126 Connecticut ave. nw., is on trial on two charges. The first charges him with "through negligence suffering a vessel of the Navy to be hazarded."

Allegations Revealed

The specification supporting this charge alleges:

"In that Charles B. McVay, 3d, captain, U. S. Navy, while so serving in command of the USS Indianapolis, making passage singly, without escort, from Guam, Marianas Islands, to Leyte, Philippine Islands, through an area in which enemy submarines might be encountered, did, during good visibility after moonrise on 29 July 1945, at or about 10:30 p.m., minus 9½ zone time, neglect and fail to exercise proper care and attention to the safety of said vessel in that he neglected and failed, then and thereafter, to cause a zigzag course to be steered, and he, the said McVay, through said negligence, did suffer the said USS Indianapolis to be hazarded; the United States then being in a state of war."

Charge Inefficiency

The second count charges the accused officer with "culpable inefficiency in the performance of duty." The specification supporting this charge alleges:

"In that Charles B. McVay, 3d, Captain, United States Navy, while so serving in command of the USS Indianapolis, making passage from Guam, Marianas Islands, to Leyte, Philippine Islands, having been informed at or about 12:10 a. m., minus nine and one-half zone time, on 30 July 1945, that the vessel was badly damaged and in sinking condition, did then and there fail to issue and see effected such timely orders as were necessary to cause said vessel to be abandoned, as it was his duty to do, by reason of which inefficiency many persons on board perished with the sinking of said vessel; the United States then being in a state of war."

The sinking of the Indianapolis went unreported for five days, although her estimated time of arrival at Leyte had been reported to authorities there and she was exactly on schedule. By the time survivors were accidentally noticed by the crew of a Marine Corps airplane on a routine scouting mission, 830 of her crew had died and only 316, all wounded, were rescued.

A Navy spokesman explained prior to opening of the court-martial that the Inspector General of the Navy was still carrying on an investigation of the sinking, the events leading up to it and those following. The court-martial of Captain McVay, he said, can cover only that part of the entire story which took place aboard the cruiser. Any action based upon any other phase of the disaster must wait upon conclusion of the investigation and a report of its findings.

Probation Unit Needs Support, Publisher Says

Thousands of first offenders—by-products of the war—will parade through the Nation's courts in the next few years, Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, said yesterday.

Meyer made this assertion in urging support of the National Probation Association.

He said many children who were left alone while both parents worked on war jobs have received "scars of insecurity" which will bring them into conflict with the law. Certain veterans, too, Meyer added, wil encounter great strains which will bring them into court.

"More than 200,000 of our boys and girls," he said, "will come before courts as first offenders this year. Our job is to guide them aright and save them from lives of crime.

"One of the finest aids in this work is the National Probation Association, which for years has been helping youth find itself by promotion of well-organized juvenile courts and probation departments, which not only help to rebuild thousands of young individual lives, but save the country, the State and the Nation the enormous expense of maintaining them in reformatories or prisons."

Contributions should be sent to Eugene Meyer, The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw., Washington 4, and checks made payable to the National Probation Association.

Lieut Baversfeld Won't Answer Query

Lieut. Carl F. Bauersfeld, assistant judge advocate in the courtmartial of Capt. Charles B. McVay 3d, was asked by a reporter in the courtroom yesterday to give his initials. His mouth clamped in a determined line and he pointed silently to the Navy's public relations officer. The public relations officer supplied Lieutenant Bauersfeld's initials.

The gin tag showed that the cotton was produced by Joe Greer, a Negro tenant on the Mitchell plantation.

Bill Proposes Czar And Housing Ceiling

5 Million Men In Army, Navy Home in 1945

By George Connery
Post Staff Writer

Nearly four million men have been brought home from overseas and another million are due back this month, the Army and the Navy announced yesterday.

In a round-up of the whole demobilization situation, the Army said it had hit the 40 per cent mark in separations. Navy, which started its program after VJ-Day, has discharged 25 per cent of those in service at that time.

Navy Tops Million Figure

Navy has topped the million figure—1,012,500 Navy, Marine and Coast Guard separations between August 17 and November 30.

Between May 12 and November 30, the War Department said 3,634,000 have been discharged.

The latter figures include men who were in this country when the war ended.

In a joint statement, Navy Secretary Forrestal and War Secretary Patterson pointed out that every expedient of sea and air transportation is being utilized to get this biggest transportation job in history done with unprecedented speed.

The statement said the rate is three times that for World War I.

Troop Ships Sail

Ships in demobilization service and those carrying relief supplies were the only vessels sailing yesterday, according to Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union. All others were tied up in the union's 24-hour work stoppage, he added.

The action was taken in support of NMU's contention that GIs were getting a bad deal. The union claimed some shipping that might be diverted to troop transportation was being employed commercially.

Union figures showed 200 or more vessels tied up. Those on the high seas are not affected.

The White House, meanwhile, reported receipt of a number of telephone calls protesting alleged delays in returning overseas veterans.

With discharges coming twice as fast as after World War I, the War Department said more than half the 8,300,000 in the Army at its peak on VE-Day will be demobilized before the first of the year.

Figures yesterday show 268,000 released from the Army in the week ending November 20, with a total of 1,186,000 for November. Between September 2 and November 30, 3,042,000 were sent back to civilian life.

A breakdown lists 15,469 doctors, 3539 dentists and 23,615 nurses discharged since VE-Day by the Army. An additional 15,000 doctors and 5000 dentists are eligible for discharge. Except for several scarce categories of specialists, these must be released within 90 days if they so desire.

Every Expedient Used

Navy gave separations by services between August 17 and November 30 as: Navy 813,967, Marines 136,694 and Coast Guard 61,-639 for the 1,012,500 total.

The Patterson-Forrestal statement said:

"Since the war ended the Army and Navy, in cooperation with the War Shipping Administration, have been utilizing every expedient of sea and air transportation to speed the return of American fighting men to their homes. This is the biggest transportation job in history, and it is being accomplished with unprecedented speed. . . .

All Available Ships

"No ship that could be used effectively for this task has been overlooked or diverted to other use. A fleet of 253 troop transports has been augmented by the conversion of 210 Liberty cargo ships, 97 Victory cargo ships, 38 hospital ships, 213 Navy assault transports and 109 Navy aircraft carriers and other combatant vessels.

"These represent all the conversions that could be completed in time to be of value in returning men to this country.

"As a result of these efforts, our troops are being brought home at three times the rate of return from Europe following World War I, even though many must be transported over sea lanes two or three times as long. An Army and Navy that took four years to build to full parts of the world is now being rewar strength and to deploy in all turned in 10 monthe after the Japanese surrender.

Soaring Home Prices Called Loophole in Inflation Defense

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer.

Prices of homes, up 50 per cent since the start of the war and soaring higher daily, are the "biggest loophole in our defense against uncontrollable inflation," Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.) declared yesterday in testimony opening hearings by the House Banking and Currency Committee on the Texan's bill to establish an emergency Office of Housing Stabilization.

In addition to putting a lid on home prices, the director of the proposed new Government agency would be empowered to:

1. Give veterans a priority during the next two years on all new homes and rental units, as well as on existing structures which might become "available."

Subsidies If Necessary

2. Break construction bottlenecks with subsidies to producers of scarce building materials, if needed to get workers for key "sore spots."

3. Channel building materials into reasonably priced homes for veterans to buy or rent, even if this means stopping construction of such commercial structures as stores, movies, and night clubs.

Hardship cases would be considered by the director and these probably would include many of the Nation's farmers, who would be able to get needed building materials, Patman said.

Where Ceilings Not Needed

If selling prices of homes remained "within bounds" in any area, price ceilings would not be established. If established, it would allow builders the full legal price on his materials and services, plus his current labor costs, plus the same margin of profit they had in 1941, Patman explained.

Ceilings would not be set on existing homes until after the first sale—and that would be the price for the two years.

Patman declared existing materials are going into high-priced homes and commercial structures and that none will be left over for reasonably priced residences unless Congress acts.

Priorities for Veterans

He charged the building industry with misrepresenting its ability to buil dhomes in its efforts to get wartime construction limitations lifted. "We would, in effect, be reinstituting these limitations and giving the priority to the veteran rather than the warworker," Patman declared. "The boys who have spent two or three years in the foxholes are entitled to as much consideration as we gave warworkers."

Representative Fred L. Crawford (R., Mich.) agreed with Patman that building materials are going to the "big fellows," but declared the proposed bill was "class legislation of the type designed to start revolutions."

Would Consider Others

"What would you do with the boy who was not physically able to get into the Army but who worked hard in a war job? He would not be able to marry and build a home," he said. "In this country before long, it seems to me, nobody can get anything unless he can show a discharge from the Army."

Representative Paul Brown (D., Ala.) said the director of the agency would need to be a "regular czar" and that he was "not much in favor of creating any new agency and giving them any new powers now that the war is over."

Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) declared the housing shortage is growing more severe and "deserves the best attention of Congress." "I confess I do not know the answer at this time," he said.

Roessler Slaying Case Slated for Grand Jury Today

Towson, Md., Dec. 3 (AP).—The Baltimore County Grand Jury was scheduled to hear tomorrow the case of Frederick Emil Roessler, 47, charged with the murder of his wife, Clara Fabing Roessler, 43.

State's Attorney James D. C. Downes said he would take the case before the grand jury. Mrs. Roessler's body was identified positively yesterday by a dentist through a partial plate and other dental work.

Her body was found Friday in a shallow grave in the cellar of her Essex, Md., home. It was identified tentatively Saturday by county police Sergt. Carroll Simmons. Roessler was then charged with her murder in a warrant issued by Magistrate T. Frank Martin.

Mrs. Roessler was missing since last July.

GI Runs Gauntlet of Red Tape To Open Business for Himself

Former Army Corporal Meyer Fiefer waited two months for his GI loan but found that it was worth it. With the money he opened a grocery store at 1832 35th st. nw. "Business is great," he says and his only grip is not enough available merchandise. Here he sells a turkey to one of his customers.

By Sam Stavisky

Third of a Series

The returning GI who'd like to go into business here for himself must run a gantlet of red tape.

Is it money he needs?

Shucks, he can get a "GI loan"—if he can meet certain conditions. As many as 62 D. C. veterans have hurdled this obstacle course, including 7 feet of forms required by Veterans' Administration.

Is it equipment he needs? Or merchandise?

Well, there's the preference a veteran has for purchasing surplus war materials—under certain conditions. Perhaps 150 Washington GIs have managed to make something out of the preference.

Income Provided

Is it a little extra income he needs to help tide him over?

Self-employed veterans are allowed a maximum of $100 a month as a "readjustment allowance." As many as 25 veterans here have gotten a lift from this provision of the GI Bill of Rights.

"GI loans"—made by the bank and with 50 per cent guaranteed up to $2000 by the Veterans Administration—take as long as two months to arrange because of conditions set down in the law and because of VA administrative procedure. So far as the bank is concerned, it only wants to know: "Is this man a good risk or a poor risk." Only one in eight veterans have managed to meet the "good risk" standards here.

Buys Out Business

Claude Pangle, 40, bought out his partner with his loan, and now operates the Clarendon Optical Co., 3176 Wilson blvd., Arlington. "It's great to be my own boss after all these years," exclaims Pangle.

Former Maj. Edward H. Reynolds of 1038 Connecticut ave. nw., purchased a surplus launch with his loan and plans to take out fishing parties.

Most D. C. surplus purchases by veterans have been limited to trucking equipment. Some office and photographic equipment has also been made available to GI's. An allotment of jeeps will be sold to District veterans shortly.

A veteran in business for himself can get the difference between what he earns and $100 a month. The few who have benefited from this provision include several professional men, one of whom had been a lieutenant colonel in the Army.

Courses For Veterans

Space, modern equipment, and refresher courses are the chief knots that must be solved by the returning doctors, dentists, and lawyers here. Eighty out of 280 D. C. medical men are back; 26 out of 105 dentists have returned. All of these veterans can easily make a good living just as quickly as they can get themselves established. The D. C. Medical and Dental Societies are trying to help out.

Next to funds, space, and equipment, hardest thing for a veteran to obtain is sound business advice, unless he knows where to turn. Some veterans go to the Board of Trade for advice, and to other business organizations. Some churches have set up business advisory committees. But advice is not organized on a community-wide basis which makes use of all community resources.

District Evangelistic Program In January Mapped by Pastors

By Robert Tate Allan

Pastors and laymen of 200 Washington and nearby Protestant churches yesterday participated in meetings preparing for a city-wide laymen's evangelistic program in January, 1946.

A "team" of nationally-known clerics addressed an all-day ministers' conference at Hamline Methodist Church, 16th and Allison sts. nw., and also area meetings last night at seven churches. The Federation of Churches' evangelism department sponsored the programs, in cooperation with the Federal Council of Churches, New York City. Similar meetings are being held throughout America this month.

Dr. George Heaton, pastor of the Myers Park Baptist Church, Charlotte, N. C., spoke at Eckington Presbyterian Church; Dr. H. H. McConnell, field secretary of the Federal Council of Churches' evangelism department, at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church; the Rev. J. Blanton Belk, pastor of St. Giles' Church, Richmond, Va., at Ninth Street Christian Church; Dr. John C. Glenn, minister of the the Duke Memorial Methodist Church, Durham, N. C., at Western Presbyterian Church; Dr. George A. Buttrick, pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City, at Central Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Harold A. Bosley, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Baltimore, at Claredon Methodist Church. Representative Homer Ramey, (R., Ohio), who taught the Men's Bible Class at Asbury Methodist Church, Toledo, for 20 years, was the speaker at Emory Methodist Church.

Two Millionth Veteran Released At Fort Meade

The two-millionth veteran of the ETO to be discharged under the point system at Fort George G. Meade, Md., was released at noon yesterday. He is Corpl. Charles Hudgins, Norfolk, Va.

Nearby Maryland and Virginia men who have been released recently include:

Small Nations Ask Access To Secret Data

London, Dec. 3 (U.P.).—Delegates of four smaller nations to the United Nations preparatory commission, striking at any hint of "secret" diplomacy," tonight proposed that all United Nations members have access to records of Security Council secret meetings unless they deal with the imposition of sanctions.

Syria made the proposal and was backed by Lebanon, Ecuador and Egypt. The proposal was in the form of an amendment to a proposed rule of procedure which would allow the Security Council to keep the records of secret meetings closed to other nations.

The United States opposed the amendment, arguing that unless Security Council records were limited to nations participating, "it might have the effect of disastrously restricting the freedom of discussion within the Council."

The Egyptian delegate said all member nations "have the right to see how the Security Council conducts its work" particularly as they may be called upon, by Security Council decisions, to take responsibilities which might lead to war."

Lebanon's delegate told the committee that "it is time now to break the policy of secret diplomacy." The Ecuadorean delegate said that the plan of closing records was "dangerous and contrary to the principles of the charter itself. The people of the world will lack confidence in this organization if we retain this rule."

Canada supported the United States. Soviet Russia had not been heard from when the committee session ended without decision.

Portions of Hebrews: II

New faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

For by it the elders obtained a good report.

Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are sen were not made of things which do appear.

By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts, and by it he being dead speaketh.

By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God.

But without faith it is impossible to please Him; for he that cometh to God must believe that He is, and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him.

Miracle Knife May Save Life Of 'Blue' Baby

Baltimore, Dec. 3 (AP).—Living proof of a surgical miracle brought rosy-checked Judith Hackman, 2, here from Buckley, Wash., today in the hope that operative genius can do for her what it did for Charles (Dickey) Walker—save her from the doom of a "blue baby."

Judy flew to Baltimore to undergo examination at Johns Hopkins Hospital which will decide whether the famous "Blalock operation" will be performed. Accompanying her were her mother, Mrs. Henry Hackman; the family doctor, F. O. Wilson, and "Herby" her doll.

Doctors say Judy has only a year to live, because not enough blood gets to her lungs to sustain life. But then Mrs. Hackman heard of "Dickey" Walker, 4, another Washington "blue baby."

On July 15, 1945, the same early death threatened him as it does Judy today. But he was saved at Hopkins by an operation discovered by Dr. Alfred Blalock and Dr. Helen B. Taussig.

Churches' Collection of Food For Overseas Gains Headway

A spontaneous move by Washington churches to collect canned foods for overseas relief is gathering momentum with the following developments:

1. All Souls' Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., collected 8500 tins of food in seven days and urged that all Washington churches adopt its plan.

2. Members of all Catholic churches were urged Sunday to bring canned and dehydrated foods to their parishes from December 9 to December 16.

3. The Washington City Church of the Brethren, 4th st. and North Carolina ave. se., agreed to serve as a Protestant church collection depot for food and clothing for Europe.

4. The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration endorsed the move by the churches 100 per cent, since UNRRA has no facilities here for food collections.

The Rev. A. Powell Davies, minister of All Souls' Church, made the plea for canned foods, high in protein, on November 25, a few days after he organized an Overseas Relief Committee, headed by Mrs. Harold H. Burton and Mrs. Ralph Fuchs.

Contributions began pouring in. Youth groups of the church voluntarily collected cardboard cartons and newspapers for packing. Men and women are devoting long hours to prepare the goods for shipment.

The cartons are sent to a warehouse in New York City, according to instructions from the Community Canning Program for Overseas Relief, an affiliate of UNRRA. They handle shipment overseas.

The Men's Bible Class of the Washington City Church of the Brethren will transport all canned food and clothing which has been collected to the United Church Relief Center at New Windsor, Md., Dr. Warren D. Bowman, pastor, said. Food and clothing can be left at the church on Saturdays from 9 a. m. to noon. Volunteers at New Windsor will take care of sorting and packing.

Chief Harry L. Woodyard reported 261 arrests made by county police during November, of which 142 were for traffic violations. The department recovered $1614 in stolen property reported during the month. Fines and costs collected during November were $1871.25.

WHO SAID "IMPORTED?"

SUPPORT THE VICTORY LOAN
There are folk-lore tales of Hendrik Hudson and his crew celebrating on moon-light nights whilst anchored in the Hudson River. It's whispered they served a delicious mixed drink called the half moon made with native wine. These original cocktail parties began with a loud shout which has been translated from the Dutch as "Who said Imported? This is American."
Human nature changes little—the modern Manhattan made with G & D American Vermouth—still wins the same joyous acclaim. Delighted connoisseurs still say: "Who said imported? This is American."

Text of President's Message on Labor

Text of President Truman's message on labor follows:

ALL who think seriously about the problem of reconversion—of changing our economy from war to peace—realize that the transition is a difficult and dangerous task. There are some who would have the Government, during the reconversion period, continue telling our citizens what to do, as was so often necessary when the very life of our Nation was at stake during the period of world conflict.

That, however, is not the policy of the Government. The policy is to remove wartime controls as rapidly as possible, and to return the free management of business to those concerned with it.

It was for the express purpose of getting away as soon as possible from some of the wartime powers and controls that the recent national Labor-Management Conference was called in Washington. Instead of retaining in the Federal Government the power over wages and labor agreements and industrial relations which a global war had made necessary, the top leaders of management and labor were invited to recommend a program under which labor relations would be turned back into the hands of those involved.

It was decided that full responsibility for reaching agreement on such a program would be left with the representatives of labor and management. Accordingly, the conference was made up of leaders of labor and management only. Government representatives participated only as observers, without vote. The agenda and the entire program were worked out by the leaders themselves.

In opening the conference, I said:

"I want to make it clear that this is your conference—a management-labor conference—and not a Government conference. You have not been chosen by me or by any Government official. You have been selected by the leading labor and industrial organizations in the United States. There has been no interference by Government in that selection. . . .

"The time has come for labor and management to handle their own affairs in the traditional American, democratic way. I hope that I can give up the President's wartime powers as soon as possible, so that management and labor can again have the full and undivided responsibility for providing the production that we must have to safeguard our domestic economy and our leadership in international affairs."

I AM sure that it was the hope of the American people that out of this conference would come some recommendation for insuring industrial peace where collective bargaining and conciliation have broken down.

The conference is now closed. The very fact that the top leaders of labor and management have met and worked together for more than three weeks is itself some progress.

Some agreements on a few general principles were also reached. For example, agreement on the principles of collective bargaining and recommendations on the detailed procedure to be used; agreement on strengthening and enlarging governmental conciliation services; recognition of the necessity of eliminating discrimination in employment; agreement on setting by voluntary arbitration grievances under labor contracts and disputes concerning their interpretation—these are all valuable.

But on the all-important question of how to avoid work stoppages when those expedients have failed, the conference arrived at no accord. Failing in that, the conference was unable to attain the objective most necessary to successful reconversion.

If industrial strife continues, the quick reconversion which has been planned, and which is now proceeding on schedule or even ahead of schedule on many fronts, will fail. In that event, we shall face a period of low production, low consumption, and widespread unemployment—instead of the high production, high employment, good markets and good wages that are within our grasp.

The history of labor relations has proven that nearly all labor disputes can and should be settled by sincere and honest collective bargaining. The vast majority of those disputes which are not adjusted by collective bargaining are settled through Government conciliation. For example, during the month of October last, 354 strikes were settled by the Conciliation Service, and 1282 labor controversies were adjusted before any work stoppages occurred.

The American people commend the many instances where management and labor have settled their problems peacefully. Many of these were in critical industries where work stoppages would have gained great prominence in the newspapers and over our radios. But when industrial disputes were settled, little notice was taken of them by press or radio.

We know, however, that there are always some disputes that cannot be settled this way.

Industrial strife in some key industries means not only loss of a great amount of wages and purchasing power; but it may have ramifications throughout the country affecting the whole reconversion process. In such industries, when labor and management cannot compose their differences, the public through the Federal Government has a duty to speak and to act. In the last analysis, labor, management and the public have the same interest.

The reconversion effort is now going well. The people have a right to expect it to succeed. Specific obstacles that stand in its way must not be allowed to defeat that expectation.

Good labor relations are just as important now as they were during the war. They should be based on justice, and not on tests of strength. Any industrial dispute which depends for settlement upon the respective strength of the parties results in loss to everyone; it causes loss of wages to the worker and his family, loss of dividends to the stockholders and owners of the industry, loss of goods to the public.

I regret that labor and management have not been able to agree on machinery that would provide a solution for existing strikes in some of the major industries and for the strikes which are threatened. Strikes already in effect may possibly cripple our reconversion program. Negotiations have broken down in other industries, and stoppages are threatened.

The American people have been patient. They have waited long in the hope that those leaders in labor and management whose business it was to handle this problem would be able to do so in agreement. The Federal Government declined time and again to make any suggestion to the conference as to proper machinery. All that the Government did was to point out the objective which the American people expected it to attain.

Now that the conference has adjourned without any recommendation on the subject, it becomes the duty of the Government to act on its own initiative. Therefore, I now suggest to the Congress that well-reasoned and workable legislation be passed at the earliest possible moment to provide adequate means for settling industrial disputes and avoiding industrial strife.

I recommend that for the settlement of industrial disputes in important Nation-wide industries there be adopted the principles underlying the Railway Labor Act. The central pattern of that act is not applicable to small industries or to small local disputes in large industries. But it would be effective, as well as fair, in such widespread industries, for example, as steel automobile, aviation, mining, oil, utilities and communications. I do not intend to make this list exclusive. Nor do I think that local inconsequential strikes, even within these industries, should be included. The objective should be to cover by legislation only such stoppages of work as the Secretary of Labor would certify to the President as vitally affecting the national public interest.

In industrial disputes in such industries, where collective bargaining has broken down, and where the conciliation service of the Federal Government has been unable to bring the parties to agreement, and where the Secretary of Labor has been unable to induce the parties voluntarily to submit the controversy to arbitration, I recommend the following procedure:

Upon certification by the Secretary of Labor to the effect that a dispute continues despite his efforts, and that a stoppage of work in the affected industry would vitally affect the public interest, the President, or his duly authorized agent, should be empowered to appoint, within five days thereafter, a fact-finding board similar to the emergency board provided for under the Railway Labor Act.

I recommend that during these five days after the Secretary of Labor has made the above certificate, it be unlawful to call a strike or lockout, or to make any change in rates of pay, hours, or working conditions, or in the established practices in effect at the time the dispute arose.

The board should be composed of three or more outstanding citizens, and should be directed to make a thorough investigation of all the facts which it deems relevant in the controversy. In its investigation it should have full power to subpoena individuals and records, and should be authorized to call upon any Government agency for information or assistance. It should make its report within 20 days, unless the date is extended by agreement of the parties with the approval of the President. The report should include a finding of the facts and such recommendations as the board deems appropriate.

While the fact-finding board is deliberating and for five days thereafter it should be made unlawful to call a strike or lockout, or to make any change in rates of pay, hours, working conditions or established practices, except by agreement.

The parties would not be legally bound to accept the findings or follow the recommendations of the fact-finding board, but the general public would know all the facts. The result, I am sure, would be that in most cases, both sides would accept the recommendations, as they have in most of the railway labor disputes.

I believe that the procedure should be used sparingly, and only when the national public interest requires it.

The legislation should pay particular attention to the needs of seasonal industries, so that the so-called "cooling-off periods" can be arranged in those industries in a manner which will not subject labor to an undue disadvantage.

There are other subjects which were on the agenda of the labor-management conference on which no agreement was reached. The most immediate, the most pressing, however, is this one of machinery. I hope that the Congress will act upon this matter as quickly as possible—and certainly before its Christmas recess.

In order to avoid any delay in the settlement of the most important existing strikes, I am appointing such a fact-finding board for the present stoppage in the dispute between General Motors Corp. and the United Automobile Workers. While this board will not have the statutory powers which I hope the Congress will soon authorize, I am sure that the American people will expect the employer and the employes to cooperate with the board as fully as if appropriate legislation has already been passed.

In the meantime, I am asking both parties to the dispute to display the same kind of patriotism as they displayed during the war. I am asking all the workers to return to work immediately, and I am asking the employers to proceed energetically with full production. I make this appeal on behalf of the American people to their fellow citizens who are now responsible for this major obstacle holding up our reconversion program.

In connection with the threatened strike involving the United States Steel Corp. and the United Steel Workers, I am appointing a similar board. The public will expect full cooperation with the board by both sides. I am making the same appeal to the United Steel Workers to remain at work pending the report of the board's findings and recommendations.

I hope the Congress will approve the steps which I am now taking. They are being taken in the interest of accelerating our production, promoting our reconversion program and pushing forward to a higher standard of living.

This is an immediate program which is fair to both sides. I hope that the Congress, naturally disappointed at the failure of labor and management to agree upon a solution for the prevention of industrial disputes, will not adopt repressive or coercive measures against either side. A free American labor and a free American private enterprise are essential to our free democratic system. Legislation which would stifle full freedom of collective bargaining on either side would be a backward step which the American people would not tolerate.

I am sure that the Congress will give its calm and careful consideration to this matter so essential to the progress of American life.

Webster Resigns As Grand Opera General Manager

William Webster, general manager of the Washington Grand Opera Co., yesterday announced his resignation but said he would remain as president of the organization.

His wife, a singer known professionally as Dorothy Remington, will "take over as general manager under my supervision," he stated.

The resignation was brought about by financial difficulties, Webster said, adding that he had devoted three years to the organization, which left him little time for concert tours and teaching.

He plans to make a concert tour in the near future and to increase the number of his pupils in order to support his family, he explained, adding that he would not have time to sing any roles with the company from now on.

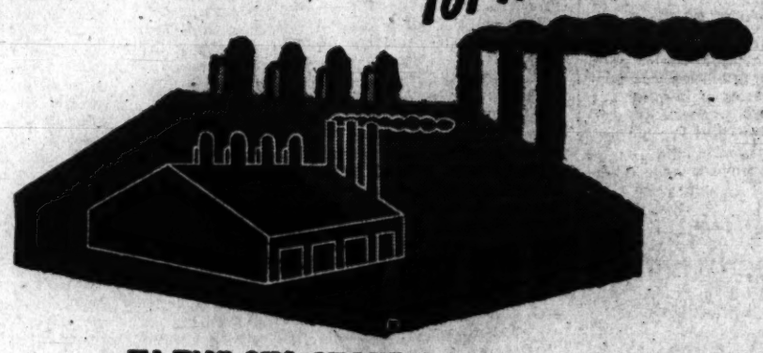
Now... DOUBLE the Opportunity for Industry



IN THE SIX-STATE AREA SERVED BY KANSAS CITY SOUTHERN LINES

The geographical problem of locating new industries is complicated by the fact that war plants have made important shifts in the country's centers of industry. With these plants, many regions are in a position to become manufacturing centers for the first time. Other areas can use this wartime expansion to increase their industrial importance. And such is the case of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas—which received the second greatest relative benefit of any group of states, or an increase of 196% over their prewar share of U. S. manufacturing.

For free enterprise looking to expansion... for industries seeking new locations... for business eyeing new markets—these six great states have twice as much to offer as before the war. Here you will find most of the synthetic rubber plants, most of the aviation gasoline plants, a large chemical industry—all of which have unlimited possibilities. Industry has doubled and skilled manpower has multiplied through wartime production. Essential needs for profitable, efficient manufacturing and marketing are plentiful, economical and easily available. This great, centrally-located section with its unequaled natural resources, now has additional advantages that will benefit a hundred varied industries—resources in physical facilities, power, skills and crafts, and excellent transportation to all America and world markets.

Then, the next morning, Faye followed Blaze, calling to him. But he already had discovered that Fala was nearby and attacked him. It won't happen again. For Blaze is no more. It's a yarn about a newspaper girl, who overhears on a bus the story of a man acquitted of murder, but still persecuted by his townsmen. So she goes there to straighten out the affair . . . Roscoe Ates, who broke himself from stuttering naturally and made a fortune by going back to it professionally, has been signed by P. R. C. to a seven-year contract. His first will be "Gentlemen With Guns" with Eddie Dean. Roscoe started the war as a major, was let out on age, and ended by playing "Sad Sack," lowliest and most beloved of fictional GIs for 14 months overseas. He told me of a stuttering lieutenant, who when applying for combat flying, was informed they couldn't take in men who stammered. Said the louie: "I d-d-don't want to t-t-talk to the d-d-darn thing—I want to f-f-fly it." He did and later became a famous fighting colonel . . . Hunt Stromberg, in New York, is trying to hook the screen rights to play before he returns to Hollywood. With two of his contract players, Michael O'Shea and Ralph Bellamy, in hits there, I'm betting he'll go for "The Red Mill' which has O'Shea.

That Bird Again

Speaking of plays, despite forthcoming motherhood, Luise Rainer opens in "Gift for the Bride" in St. Louis. From then on it'll be a neck and neck race between the footlights and the stork. Hmmm, come to think of it, that bird's got a pretty long neck . . . Dore Schary, who's producing "How to Make a Movie," is being besieged with offers from people willing to work in the film free. It'll be great publicity. Picture will be finished in time for the Academy Awards dinner . . . After the GIs thought enough of her to request her appearance on three battle fronts, Mary Brian still is faced with the old Hollywood bugaboo. She can't get a job here . . . The reason wou won't be seeing much Technicolor stuff for the next year is the tremendous shortage in materials because of the war. Republic, for instance, is delaying release of "I've Always Loved You" until next October so it can be finished in color . . . Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone, and Eddie Arnold have formed a club in which each can tell one story a day about the past. If he goes over the limit, he's fined. What an idea for the rest of the town! . . . Leon Balasco has been signed for a local stint at Club Donroy . . . After traveling 23,000 miles, Gracie Fields writes she caught up with her last picture in Rome and had to view it with Italian subtitles . . . Jon Hall and Frances Langford have bought a plane for January delivery. They'll use it chiefly touring hospitals.

Double-Talk Goes Japanese

Danny Kaye, who caught the limelight by sing-songing the names of 54 Russian composers, has a new routine in which he gives out with the names of South Pacific places he visited, including 20 Jap towns. . . . After Barry Fitzgerald wrote his own dialogue for scene in "Easy Come, Easy Go," he blew the lines and for once an actor couldn't cuss the writer. . . . Billy De Wolfe has gone East for a visit to his home town, Quincy, Mass. . . . Gloria Lloyd—Harold's daughter—is giving Bob Walker's heart the trips. . . . Virginia Mayo hits town this week after a session in the East. . . . Judy Canova's husband, Chet England, just out of the army, will accompany her when she goes east for her air show. . . . Jeffrey Steele is bolstering his acting salary as a real estate salesman. First customer was Bob Hope. . . . In preparation for forthcoming blessed event, Harry von Zell has added a $5000 nursery.

Class to Give Play

Two performances of "Ever Since Eve" will be presented by Greenbelt High School senior class tomorrow and Thursday in the Municipal Auditorium at 8 p. m. Miss Barbara Runnion and Donald Grimm are co-starred in the show.

DON WINSLOW

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

New Senator William Knowland of California is a stanch Republican. Stuart Symington, Surplus War Property administrator, is a Democrat. But they seem to have something in common when it comes to helping solve the tangled labor situation.

At any rate, Symington telephoned Senator Knowland the other day to congratulate him on his recently announced plan for labor to share in company profits.

"It's a great idea," the surplus property administrator told the Senator from California. "I know. I tried it in St. Louis and it worked."

What Symington put across in St. Louis was an experiment which the Labor-Management Conference could well have studied. He had a bad strike in his Emerson Electric plant, led by a union leader who frankly admitted he was a Communist.

Finally, Symington proposed profit-sharing. At first labor was suspicious. So were the stockholders and directors. But Symington persevered. Finally they agreed to a plan whereby profits at the end of the year were divided, partly on the basis of seniority, partly on the basis of skill and importance of work.

First year the profits were only $13,000, but last year they totaled two million dollars, a lush melon to divide up among employes. The latter are now 100 per cent sold on the idea and so are the stockholders. The workers worked harder, profits are larger and stockholders got a bigger dividend check.

"Labor got 30 per cent of every nickel we made in 1944," says Symington, "and a system like that is the only basis for permanent peace."

Note—Symington's survey of various profit-sharing plans leads him to believe that whenever it has been tried out sincerely it has never failed.

Combat Decorations

One unfortunate fact in this war is that many of the enlisted men and young officers who performed miracles of heroism got no decorations for them. As one lieutenant described it:

"We were so busy fighting that I never had time to write down citations. It didn't seem important then. But now that we are back home and see all the spinach on other people's bosoms, naturally it makes the combat boys a little envious. We didn't realize that the folks at home considered these things so important."

Probably it's too late for some of the combat men who so richly deserve recognition to get it now. However, there may be some consolation in realizing the manner in which some decorations are wangled. For instance, this writer recalls a telegram in a United States colonel's office in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, from a United States colonel in Bucharest, Romania, just after the last armistice. It read:

"Am sending one carload sugar for Yugoslav government relief. How about that order of St. Sava you promised me."

Or again many combat veterans recall the spinach on the bosom of Brig. Gen. Julius Holmes. They did not realize at first that his Order of the Phoenix from Greece, his Lebanese Order of Merit, his Commander of the Crown of Yugoslavia, his Southern Cross of Brazil, his Tunisian Nishan Iffticas and numerous other medals were largely received when he was protocol officer for the New York World's Fair.

Hurley's Spinach

Again the delightful and irrepressible Patrick J. Hurley, former Ambassador to China, could tell an interesting story of how he got the Silver Star citation which so proudly adorns his chest. It was awarded for "gallantry in action on November 11, 1918, in voluntarily making a reconnaissance under heavy enemy fire."

November 11, 1918, of course, was Armistice Day, and everyone knew on that fateful morning the war was coming to an end. Furthermore, what the citation does not say is that Hurley was with the Judge advocate general's office which operates well behind the lines.

But an hour or so before the armistice, Hurley came forward in company with Col. E. St. John Grebel to watch the historic end of the war. They were about 2000 yards behind the lines when Lieut. Col. Wilbur Rogers of the Seventy-seventh Field Artillery stopped them and told them the show was over. But they were bent on going forward anyway.

Seven months after the war was over, on June 3, 1919, Hurley mysteriously received a Silver Star citation for "voluntarily making a reconnaissance under heavy enemy fire on November 11, 1918."

Regardless of any other facts in the citation, the trip obviously was "voluntary."

Bilbo Loves Persecution

The story is being whispered round that Mississippi's Senator Bilbo actually paid to have his office picketed by a wounded war veteran.

Whether true or not, it is a fact that the Mississippi filibusterer always has thrived on persecution. He was in jail on a contempt-of-court charge when he first began his campaign for the Senate. It made him a martyr. Since then, Bilbo has always capitalized on the attacks against him. He is now claiming a Northern conspiracy to dictate to the State of Mississippi whom it should send to the Senate. That's why it's rumored that he paid the veteran to picket his office so he could pull the persecution charge again.

Note—Meanwhile ,various anti-Bilbo candidates are on the horizon, latest being Lieut. Comdr. Nelson Levings, only naval officer from Mississippi who served on the battleship USS Mississippi.

The Maritime Commission is about to disintegrate, just at a time when it's hardest to keep a merchant marine going. Admiral "Jerry" Land, the chairman, is exiting soon. . . . Admiral Howard Vickery, another able commissioner, is leaving to head the American Bureau of Shipping, which establishes safety standards for ships. Numerous young shipping experts who have worked faithfully are stampeding for private jobs. . . . The National Labor Relations Board, once kicked all over the lot by business and various labor factions, has won unique recognition. One thing the Labor-Management Conference could agree on was to increase appropriations for NLRB, and to keep it independent of the Labor Department. Yet, a few short years ago, NLRB was considered the greatest enemy of business. Billy Rose, the big Broadway producer, is having servant troubles. Reason is Senator Bilbo. A news columnist reported that Rose was on a committee with Senator Bilbo to plan a national stadium in Washington, D. C. Billy never met Bilbo, but New York Negroes hate Bilbo so that they won't work for Billy Rose. They think he's a friend of Bilbo's.

C. U. Players Score Again in Classic Play; Notes of the Theater

A DISTINGUISHED ACHIEVEMENT has been wrought by the Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University in its production of Sophocles' "Electra," which last Friday night inaugurated a three-week engagement in the campus theater.

In its first full production of a classic Greek tragedy, the University Theater has brought to the play written in 410 B. C., the lucidity and powerful human impact that might be expectde of any thoughful interpretation of a modern work, without sacrifice of either the beauty or the dignity of Edward Percy's poetic translation.

Leo Carrillo

With utmost simplicity, yet with immeasurable helpfulness to the projection of the drama as one of bitter human conflict, as against the exposition of a mythological fantasy, "Electra" has been staged, directed and lighted with that unobtrusive skill which transforms every facet of the undertaking into an integral part of the dramatic movement of a grim and compelling adventure in human experience.

The homogenous and full rounded effect is enhanced by the retention of the chorus, whihc, too, here is made a contributory factor in the completeness and richly inmpressive eloquence with which a stark and penetrating study of a tortured mind, heart and soul has been expounded.

Electra is, indeed, a towering and flawless symbol of tragedy. Woven into her indomitable will to avenge her mother's murder of her father, Agamemnon is the consciousness that is the eventuation of such justice must repose the source of further anguish, until the House of Atreus can finally be set in order.

Uninvolved as the pattern of the dram is, the deepest and most vibrant emotions of the feminine heart are embraced within its framework.

To the interpretation of this monumental and imperishable contemplation of human character, the University Theater has summoned a cast of remarkably competent players. Many of them come as talents new to Catholic University's habitcal audiences.

Newcomers Score

Janet Fehm brings brilliant highlights and sharp shadings to the title role, with a peculiar facility in imbuing the poetic cadences of her impassioned speeches with both clarity and conviction. Hers was quite the individual triumph of the evening at Sunday night's performance.

Striking contrast was lent the character of the more moral and less vindictive sister, Chrysothemis, by Elaine Adams, whose portrayal of the gentler nature was illuminatingly drawn, and Lois Fern, as Clytemnestra, the ill-starred queen mother, permitted her role to lack nothing of its coldhearted authority on the side of adamant evil.

On a parity with the excellence of the feminine contributions to the integrity of the tragedy were those of J. P. Towey, as Orestes, the agent of Electra's unseating of her oppressors; John Green, the Aegisthus, husband of Clytemnestra, and John H. Easley, whose Old Man, was limned in telling strokes.

Mary Eileen Capek, Georgina GeKas, Norma MacHardy, Suzanne McDonald, Ro Murphy, Marie St. John and Johanne Thomas, by the snuperb unison of their expressive reading, lend the Chorus an indispensable value as a vital element in the full-dimensioned stature of the classic work.

Alan Schneider, Dr. Josephine McGarry Callan, Art and Technical Director Ralph Brown and Ruth Schmigelsky are deserving of the highest encomiums for the distinction they have accorded the material aspects of an undertaking that sheds new luster upon the accomplishments of Director Rev. Gilbert V. Hartke and his associates at C. U.

It seems to be the intention of this week to atone for the paucity of last in the matter of new pictures on the downtown-first-run screens. There will be at least two, instead of only one! Coming to Loew's Palace on Thursday, will be "What Next, Corporal Hargrove," a sequel to M-G-M's original "What Now, etc.," with Robert Walker and Keenan Wynn again in the roles they created, but with pert little Jean Porter to supply the recurrent romantic interest. On the same day, at the Capitol, Eddie Bracken and Veronica Lake, abetted by a large cast of farceurs, will take over in "Hold That Blonde," which, it may be recalled, we are betting as high as 11 to 10 will be a laughing hit. There is a possibility, also, of a new film at the Earle, come Thursday, but the present likelihood—as of Monday afternoon—seems to be that "Too Young to Know" will be entering timorously upon a second week.

"Weekend at the Waldorf" will be switching over to continue uninterruptedly at Loew's Columbia. And that seems to be it, except that the new stage bill accompanying "Hargrove" at the Capitol, will have that eminent actor-comedian, Leo Carrillo, as its headliner. Mr. Carrillo, in at least one view, doesn't get around half often enough.

It might be repeated, in passing, that "Spring in Brazil," starring Milton Berle at the National in view of its special Sunday night performance, will be giving only one matinee this second week and that one on Saturday.

"Appointment in Tokyo," described as "one of the greatest film coverages to come out of World War II," will be screened for members of the National Press Club tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Press Club Auditorium. Produced by the Army Pictorial Service, Signal Corps, and released by Warner Brothers through the War Activities Committee, the picture presents the first inside story of the war in the Pacific from Bataan to the beaches of Tokyo Bay.

Regardless of what may happen this week, three important attractions coming to the screen at the Earle Theater, presumably in the order named, are Columbia's "She wouldn't Say Yes," costarring Rosalind Russell and Lee Bowman; "San Antonio," with Errol Flynn and Alexis Smith at the top of the cast, and "Kiss and Tell," one of the comedy hits of the season, with Shirley Temple and Corliss Archer. Ticketed for the Metropolitan at an early date is "Danger Signal," costarring Faye Emerson and Zachary Scott. "Kiss and Tell," by the way, will be bond-premiered at the Earle on December 19, which is by way of being a Wednesday.

FBI Trails Russ Agent Who Has A-Bomb Secrets

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—The New York Journal-American said today that for the last two years the FBI has been trailing a Russian secret service agent "who, it is believed, may have obtained atomic bomb secrets."

The FBI there and in Washington refused to comment.

The paper said agents found a package in the spy's room in Chicago in 1943 that "was found to contain highly confidential details of atomic development."

The paper said the agent was living now in a midtown hotel and was surrounded by a squad of FBI men, operating on a 24-hour basis. It did not give his name.

Carried Forged Passports

The Journal-American said the agents entered the United States from Canada in 1938 and carried forged passports. The man first appeared in the United States in 1931 as a member of a Soviet purchasing commission, but returned to Moscow the same year, the paper added.

The newspaper related that the man was "employed" by an obscure music shop on Fifth Avenue here at $75 a week, but had accounts running into the thousands of dollars in Manhattan banks.

The paper said the FBI first got on the trail of the man in Chicago, in 1943, adding:

"A scientist, working on atomic bomb development in a Chicago laboratory, had been suspected. Unwittingly, this scientist led the FBI to the man.

"This scientist . . . had gone for a walk through a park. He was trailed. . . . The scientist was seen to stop and hand a second man a package. No words were exchanged . . .

"That night, while the man was out of his room, the FBI entered it and found the package. This package was rushed to Washington and inspected by scientists assigned to the atomic bomb project. "It was found to contain highly confidential details of atomic bomb development."

Inducted Into Army

The Journal-American said the scientist was immediately inducted into the army, "as were more than 100 other persons subsequently believed guilty of passing out information on the atomic bomb. This scientific is now stationed on an obscure South Pacific island where he can be watched."

Roosevelt's Church Shuns Elliott as Vestry Member

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Dec. 3 (U.P.)—The vestry of President's Roosevelt's home church, St. James, at Hyde Park, has decided not to press its plan of making the President's thrice married son, Elliott, one of its members, it was disclosed today.

The vestry acted after Bishop William T. Manning, head of the New York diocese of the Episcopal Church, announced Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt was not "eligible" because he was "not in good standing" with the church.

Nationalists Only 30 Miles From Mukden

Chungking, Dec. 3 (AP).—Chinese Nationalist forces advancing in Manchuria were reported within 30 miles of the important city of Mukden today and their commander said, "We expect to be in Harbin in a month or so."

Chinese Central News Agency said air transportation of Nationalist troops farther into Manchuria would start next week.

The Russians, who have agreed to stay in Manchuria until January 3 so the Nationalists can consolidate in that valuable territory, apparently have made no commitments to admit the Nationalists anywhere except Mukden and Changchun.

Some Nationalist sources here still alleged the Russians were aiding the Communists, but Lieut. Gen. Tu Yu-ming, supreme Nationalist commander in the northeast, said he had found no evidence that any foreign power was giving his opponents material help. Tu said he expected the opposition to collapse within two months because of lack of organization and supplies.

"I do not expect any large-scale fighting anywhere in Manchuria," he said, adding that he expected to be in Mukden in a few days.

Chinese press dispatches today from Inner Mongolia said the Communists besieging the city of Paotow had failed in a new attempt to scale the walls and might have to abandon their siege shortly after repeated repulses.

Unrest Grows As Japs Seek Increased Taxe

Tokyo, Dec. 3 (AP).—The Japanese Diet, operating amid growing domestic unrest, was told today that heavy tax increases would be required to meet a proposed budget of $907,000,000.

Finance Minister Keizo Shibusawa, presenting the budget, said estimated revenues would meet less than two thirds of it. He called for increases in income taxes, luxury taxes, many indirect taxes and higher prices for sake and tobacco, which are government monopolies. The budget then was passed on to committees for study.

Sharpening coal shortages and reported increases in crimes of violence posed additional problems which must be faced eventually.

Diet sessions have been marked by wrangling over war responsibility, but General MacArthur's new list of 59 wanted big-time operators made it clear its decisions on that subject would carry no weight.

The new list included a prince of the blood, eight peers and two former premiers, leaving out of the "wanted" category only two men who have served as government leaders since 1937. They were former Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye and former Navy Minister Mitsumasa Yonai.

The 71-year-old, white-moustached Prince Morimasa Nashimoto, who said he had no idea why he was on the list, declared he was a prince without influence, a field marshal without a command and a Shinto religious ritualist without duties. Foreign Minister Shigeru Yoshida asked Allied headquarters to "reprieve" the old man, but no immediate reply was received.

Soviet Publicist Assails U. S. Free Press

Moscow, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—The Soviet publicist, N. Baltisky, today attacked the campaign of American and British press agencies for international press freedom as a smokescreen "for not unsuccessful efforts to concentrate all newspaper business in the hands of big capital."

Baltisky contended the great press agencies, United Press, Reuters and Associated Press, are owned or controlled by a small group of rich newspapers or individuals and that the concentration of power in the news industry was no smaller than in any other type of capitalist industry.

The United Press and Associated Press, he said, are still competing in the United States but Reuter has achieved a monopoly in the British Empire. He noted the United Press and Associated Press are swiftly penetrating all parts of the world.

"The three press agencies," he said, "represent powerful capitalistic or, as they prefer to call themselves, commercial concerns of international significance. It is not surprising that these concerns are eager for expansion of their spheres of interest and monopoly.

"Is it decent for the businessmen heading these commercial establishments to palm off their economic expansion on world public opinion under the label of a struggle for international freedom of the press?" Baltisky asked.

He pointed out that A. P. had been charged in the American courts with monopolistic practices and that "Reuters is well known as a monopolistic enterprise not loving freedom of competition within the borders of its spheres of influence."

Lieutenant Dechman's body was one of two taken from the Potomac 3 miles below Indianhead Friday. The other was that of Lieut. Comdr. Fred H. David Leavitt of Chicago, Ill., have not been found.

Lieutenant Dechman, who was attending photographic interpretation school here after a year with the naval intelligence on the carriers Marcus Island and Swanee, lived at 1901 14th st. se.

A native of Lakeland, Fla., he was graduated from the University of Florida and was an architect in Palm Beach, Fla., prior to entering the service in April, 1943.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lorraine Eddy Dechman, and two sons, Stephen Eddy Dechman, 4 years old, and Thomas M. Dechman, II, of Palm Beach; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Dechman, of Highlands, N. C., and two brothers, Thomas A. Dechman, of Atlanta, Ga., and Daniel W. Dechman, who was recently discharged from the service, of Milcum, Tenn.

Has Unborn Baby

'Lost' Bride Found With Another Hero

MRS. PAULINE JEAN CARBONE

Dubuque, Iowa, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—The missing English bride of an American war hero was found today in the home of another war hero who is, she announced, the father of her unborn child.

It developed that she had been missing only to her husband, Harold Carbone, former Army Air Force lieutenant, who is a GI student at the University of Rochester, N. Y. Carbone had expected her to join him there. Instead, she left the first London-Chicago commercial plane at its American terminus Sunday and proceeded here to the home of Capt. Darrell Bechen of the Army Air Forces, and his mother.

Carbone had reported her "missing" and today the beautiful Mrs. Jean Carbone, 19, announced through Bechen's mother that she was here, but was too upset by the "excitement" to see anyone.

As for Carbone, he heard the news from his bride last night, by telephone. She asked for a divorce and he said she could have one.

Mrs. Carbone, formerly Jean Pauline Gloor, daughter of Emil Gloor, a London dress designer, met Carbone when he was stationed in England. He is the holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters, and the European Theater Ribbon with four battle stars. They were married November 6, 1944. He returned to this country a month later for discharge. Since then he has been trying to arrange for his bride to join him.

Belchen flew 65 combat missions over Europe and is one of Dubuque's outstanding war heroes.

Arabs Declare Goods Boycott On Palestine

Cairo, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—The Arab League today announced its seven member states will boycott all Jewish-produced goods from Palestine, beginning January 1.

The league's secretary general, Abdul Rahman Azzam Bey, said the boycott was ordered because Jewish Palestine industry was "based on Zionist funds, collected in foreign countries, to serve a political purpose—the establishment of a Jewish national home and state in Palestine.

"This political purpose is the motive behind Jewish industry and commerce in Palestine. This purpose is not realizable except by the exploitation of markets in Arab countries."

Without indicating their nature, Azzam said the league was prepared to take additional steps if necessary to combat Zionist aims.

Egypt, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Lebanon, Yemen, Transjordan and Syria are member states of the Arab League. Arab groups in Palestine are represented in its councils.

Azzam called upon nonleague Arab states to join in the boycott. He specifically exempted the products of Jewish industries in Arab countries.

"Jews in Egypt, Iraq, Syria, etc., are our compatriots and fellow-countrymen," he said. "We always make the keenest distinction between Zionists (who advocate making Palestine a Jewish state) and Jews.

"Zionists are our political adversaries, but Jews are our brothers."

Park A. Cole

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. today at the family residence, 816 Massachusetts ave. ne., Washington, for Park A. Cole, 56, who died Sunday morning of a heart attack.

Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery. Mr. Cole had been ill since Wednesday.

A native of Alexandria, he was the son of the late Dr. John Cole and Mrs. Henrietta Gibson Cole of Alexandria, and moved to Washington with his family during his childhood. He had been employed in the Government 38 years, first in the Patent Office, and later in the Department of the Interior where he was a clerk in the bureau of mines. He was a member of the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd in northeast Washington.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Nannie G. Cole; a sister, Mrs. A. H. Wellensiek of Cleveland, Ohio; and a brother, David J. H. Cole of Washington.

Gen. Martin Cerezo

Madrid, Dec. 3 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Saturnino Martin Cerezo, 79, last defender of the Philippines against American forces in 1899, died Sunday. Saturnino continued resistance for a year after the end of the Spanish-American war.

Italy's Silk Cocoon Output Takes Drop

Rome.—Silk production in northeastern Italy, which supplied the bulk of the national cocoon output in the past, is expected to fall far below last year's figures.

Let's Look at the Wage Record

Leaders of the UAW-CIO have never accused General Motors of paying low wages.

They have not because they could not. GM hourly wage rates are substantially higher than the average for industry in general.

Under these circumstances the wage demands of UAW leaders appear fantastic.

Without offering anything in return, they demand a wage jump that would add 30% to the pay of workers already among the highest paid in the country.

In 1941, the last peacetime year, the average GM factory worker received a wage that put his income among the top one-third of all incomes in the United States—not just labor incomes but all incomes.

The average GM factory worker can buy much more food, clothing and other necessities—as well as more of the comforts of life—than the average industrial worker can.

General Motors has always paid high wages to its employes. It always expects to.

Today, conveyors like this are again carrying thousands of new telephones.

But it takes far more than just telephones to provide service. It takes cable, central office equipment and many other items that cannot be produced and fitted into a telephone system overnight.

Western Electric, supply unit of the Bell Telephone Companies, is now tackling the biggest peacetime job in its history—furnishing materials and equipment to make up for shortages caused by four years of war, so that we can again supply telephone service to all who want it.

You can count on them and on us to get this done just as fast as humanly possible.

The Dilemma In China

IF AS A result of Mr. Hurley's resignation there is to be an inquiry into our China policy, we shall need first of all to have a clear account of the military situation in China. There is no secret about the situation, and the main facts are not in dispute. Only in the light of the military facts can anyone begin to understand the controversy between Mr. Hurley and our China experts, or the problems which General Wedemeyer has been struggling with, or the decisions which President Truman and Secretary Byrnes will have to make on the basis of what General Marshall reports and recommends.

LIPPMANN

THE FIRST THING which we have to remember is that when Japan capitulated, General MacArthur, acting as Supreme Allied Commander, assigned to Chiang Kai-shek's national government the task of receiving the surrender of the Japanese armies in China. In Manchuria the Japanese were to surrender to the Soviet army.

The second thing is that in North China there were not enough national Chinese troops to receive the surrender, and to disarm the Japanese forces.

The third is that there were Chinese Communist troops in North China. They were not authorized to receive the surrender of the Japanese, and they were not strong enough to compel the Japanese to surrender. Thus three and a half months after VJ-Day there is still a Japanese army of some 325,000 men in North China. The major part of them have not surrendered and are not disarmed.

THE IMMEDIATE American problem in China is what to do about this Japanese army. It is supposed to surrended to Chiang Kai-shek, and it would surrender if Chiang's troops could get to the area where the Japanese are. But even with the help which we have been giving Chiang, he has not been able to get there with his troops. For, contrary to our expectations, he diverted to Manchuria two of the armies which we transported to North China, and what he had left in North China was not strong enough to deal with the Communist troops who are between him and the Japanese.

As a result, we, who have about 59,000 Marines at and near certain ports in North China, have several alternatives to choose from. We can use our own troops, not only as we have been using them to transport Chiang's troops to North China and to protect their communications, but also to fight a way for Chiang's army into the Japanese area, and to help his army occupy that area and defend it against the Communists after the Japanese have been removed. This would be outright intervention in the Chinese civil war, and once we were committed to it our troops could not withdraw, and would probably have to be reinforced, until China, assisted by American troops, had overcome the resistance of the Communist guerilla forces.

A SECOND COURSE would be for the American troops to receive the Japanese surrender, and remove the Japanese army to the vicinity of the ports, and ship it back to Japan as fast as shipping is available. It is estimated that this would take about three months.

There is little doubt that the Japanese, though they greatly outnumber our troops, would willingly surrender to us, and that the Chinese Communists could not, and probably would not, interfere.

But if we took this course, the result would be that when the Japanese were withdrawn from the strategic centers of North China, these centers would be occupied by the Communists, who are close at hand, and not by Chiang's troops, which are still far away and are not numerous.

By taking this course we should not be intervening in the Chinese civil war, but we should leave behind us a China divided between national and Communist troops, each occupying important strategic areas of the country. The alignment for a protracted and indecisive civil war would then exist, with every prospect that because China would long be turbulent and weak, its independence and territorial integrity—which we have championed for 50 years—would be in constant jeopardy.

THIS IS A horrid dilemma—to become entangled by intervention in China's civil war, or to get out of China in such a way as to leave China hopelessly divided, and dangerously weak. The dilemma arises from the fact that though Chiang's government is the only legitimate and recognized government of China, its authority is not recognized in important parts of China, and it lacks the military force to impose its authority. It is in theory the national government of China. But in fact it is not the government of all of China.

Long before V-J Day the situation which has existed since V-J Day was clearly foreseen and predicted by the American career men—notably by Mr. Atcheson. Neither the China experts nor Mr. Hurley nor President Roosevelt nor anyone else who understood the Chinese problem, has ever had any doubt that there was only one way to avoid the horrid dilemma in which we now find ourselves. That was to mediate a peace between Chiang and his Chinese opponents, and to stop the civil war by inducing the Chinese to form a coalition government in which not only the Chinese Communists but the liberal and democratic Chinese could participate.

MR. HURLEY, under instructions from President Roosevelt, tried to do just that. He failed. The question is why he failed. His contention is that the career men—our China experts—gave the Communists of Yenan reason to believe that they need not make the necessary concessions to Chiang. The contention of the career men would undoubtedly be that Mr. Hurley led Chiang to believe that he did not need to make enough concessions.

Except that the reputations of Mr. Hurley and of certain of the career men are at stake, this dispute is now academic. The problem today is how to effect the surrender of the Japanese army without becoming embroiled in a Chinese civil war and without creating a condition where a long civil war, even if we manage to extricate ourselves, is inevitable.

There can be no satisfactory solution of this problem except the one which Mr. Hurley and the career men worked for and have thus far failed to achieve. It is to use our power and influence in China to induce and compel the Chinese factions to reach a working agreement upon a government which will be national, not only in theory, but in fact.

THAT WILL BE General Marshall's mission in China, and if he succeeds this country will have one more reason to be forever grateful to him.

'Paris Sky Chief' Opens Air Service To French Capital

While a military band played "The Last Time I Saw Paris" a giant four-motored Constellation plane, "Paris Sky Chief" took off for the French capital yesterday.

The flight inaugurates Transcontinental Western Airlines regular service to France. Before leaving, the plane was christened by Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet. A specially-constructed carbon monoxide fire extinguisher was used for the christening instead of the traditional champagne.

The Lockheed plane, with a cruising speed of 300 miles an hour, is scheduled to make the flight in 16 hours, stopping en route at Gander, Newfoundland and Shannon, Ireland. Passengers include French and Irish officials in this country, Postmaster General Robert Hannegan, members of Congress and newspaper men.

A shipment of penicillin as gifts to the mayors of Paris and Dublin from Mayors Kerrigan of Boston and Kelly of Chicago was aboard.

Sen. Gurney to Demand Action By President in Truck Strike

By the Associated Press

Senator Gurney (R., S. Dak.), acting on behalf of himself and 13 other Senators, yesterday laid the Midwest truck strike controversy on the White House doorstep and requested a solution.

Gurney told a reporter he would send a transcript of a hearing attended by the Senators yesterday to President Truman along with a suggestion that he appoint a fact-finding board similar to that he set up in the General Motors strike case.

Gurney and other Senators who called the meeting to discuss the strike affecting 161 trucking firms in seven Midwest States were openly irked over failure of Daniel J. Tobin, head of the AFL International Teamsters Union, to attend.

Tobin had been invited along with William Wilson of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., president of the Midwest Operators Association. Wilson appeared and talked to the Senators for more than an hour.

Tobin's failure to show up "indicates how little he cares what the public or Congress thinks in this situation," Senator Ball (R., Minn.) declared.

"The union is put in an awful bad position by refusing to be here or to tell its story," Gurney interjected.

Gurney said he spoke for all the Senators present in asserting there was no valid reason for the union to refuse to even meet the operators and negotiate.

Wilson had testified that the operators repeatedly had asked the union to negotiate with them, but the union declined and insisted the operators must sign a contract similar to that in effect east of the Mississippi River.

Other Senators attending were Bushfield (R., S. D.), Wilson (R., Iowa), Shipstead R., Minn.), Butler and Wherry (R., Neb.), Young and Langer (R., N. D.), Donnell (R., Mo.), Briggs (D., Mo.), and Reed (R, Kan.)

Meanwhile, Representative Mundt (R., S. D.) told a reporter that a group of representatives meeting in Mundt's office last week on the truck strike would join forces with the Senators in seeking a solution.

Children Search For Kidnaped Baby After Plea

Chelsea, Mass., Dec. 3 (AP).—Hundreds of school children responded today to the appeal of a sailor, James J. Carlan, to help find his kidnaped 6-month-old baby, Ronald, whom Carlan has never seen.

Officials joined with Carlan and his wife, Rose, 23, in asking all school children of this Boston suburb to report any clues that may lead to the finding of the baby—taken from his carriage six days ago, apparently by an elderly woman.

The sailor, who hastened home from Oakland, Calif., went with Mrs. Carlan to a special assemby of the Williams Grammar School today. Mrs. Carlan was unable to speak, but the young sailor told the children:

"If you know anything which would help us to find him, please go to the police immediately."

Who Foots The Bill?

Communication From H. B. Gill

I NOTE WITH INTEREST your editorial in the Sunday edition (12/2/45) entitled "Case for a New Jail." In this editorial you stated "Under the present system the Federal Government merely pays a stated sum per day for the lodging of each Federal prisoner sent to the jail, placing all further responsibility on District officials." Please be advised that the Federal Government does not and has not paid any monies to the District Government for the care of Federal prisoners either at the District of Columbia Jail or at the Reformatory at Lorton, Va., since 1912.

During the month of September, 1945, there were 79 Federal Government cases boarded in the District Jail and in October, 1945, 94 for a total of 3546 mandays at the District Jail at the expense of the District of Columbia taxpayers. At $2 per day (the approximate cost of maintaining a prisoner in the D. C. Jail) this amounted to $7092 for these two months alone or at the rate of $42,552 per year. In any other jurisdiction, the Federal Government would reimburse the local jail administration for this expense. This is not done in the District of Columbia.

On October 23, 1945 (the last time we checked) there were confined at the District of Columbia Reformatory at Lorton, Va., 118 persons convicted of Federal offenses serving sentences of over one year. At $2 per day this would amount to a total annual expense borne by the District of Columbia Government totalling $58,400. For this the District of Columbia is not reimbursed one cent.

On the other hand the District of Columbia had at that time approximately 245 prisoners convicted in District Courts confined in Federal penal institutions. For their board, the Federal Government charges the District of Columbia approximately $200,000 per year. Of these 245 prisoners, approximately 80 are convicted of Federal offenses and are properly Federal charges. Nevertheless, since they are convicted in D. C. Courts, the Federal Government charges the District of Columbia for their board in Federal penal institutions.

ON DECEMBER 5, 1944, I called the attention of the Director of Public Welfare to this situation and Section 24-421 of the 1940 District of Columbia Code which reads as follows:

There shall be allowed and paid by the Attorney General for the subsistence of prisoners in the custody of any marshal of the United States and the Superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail in the District of Columbia such sum as it reasonably and actually costs to subsist them. And it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to prescribe such regulations for the government of the marshals and the Superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail in the District of Columbia in relation to their duties under this chapter as will enable him to determine the actual and reasonable expenses incurred.

I requested an opinion from the Corporation Counsel as to whether it would be proper for us to submit to the Attorney General a bill for the subsistence of these prisoners confined to the D. C. Jail.

In response to this request, I received a copy of an opinion rendered to the Commissioners by Richmond B. Keech, D. C. Corporation Counsel, dated January 30, 1945, in which he held that "the responsibility for support of all prisoners committed to the District Jail for offenses against the United States" had been transferred to the Commissioners by the District of Columbia Appropriation bill for 1912. This opinion was approved by the Commissioners on February 6, 1945.

I recently had occasion to discuss this matter with representatives of the District of Columbia Auditor, A. R. Pilkerton, when they were auditing accounts at the jail and they expressed considerable interest in the situation.

I shall appreciate it if you will note these corrections in your paper.

Faithfully,
HOWARD B. GILL,
General Superintendent,
D. C. Penal Institutions.

Navy Secrecy

It is disappointing to those of us outside the Navy to learn that the court-martial of Capt. Charles B. McVay probably will not reveal why no search was made for his ship, the USS Indianapolis, after she sank in the Philippine Sea. This much is known: The cruiser's estimated time of arrival had been radioed from Guam to Leyte. She did not arrive as scheduled. Then, for five days of utter silence from the ship, nobody apparently was worried about her disappearance, and nobody made any effort to find out what had become of her and the 1196 men she carried. The tragedy was that 316 men were left floating helplessly in the sea.

One explanation of this seeming callousness occurs at once to any civilian who has dealt with the Navy in peace or in war. That is the Navy's mania for secrecy. This extends even into its own organization, and it may have been sufficient reason in itself to stifle any concern about the missing ship. The Navy has always been so concerned with super-duper secrecy that it often does not itself know what it is doing. One officer may have information which the officer at the next desk lacks, but he keeps it to himself, together with his pride in the "secret service," while his deskmate makes perhaps a tragic mistake which the information at his elbow would have averted.

It is not unreasonable to suppose that the authorities at Leyte assumed, when the Indianapolis failed to arrive, that she had been diverted by secret orders. Nor is it unreasonable to suppose that the authorities at Guam, when the Indianapolis was unreported at Leyte, assumed that her captain had received at Leyte, or had been given for perusal en route, secret orders which had not been transmitted to them. That this explanation is not far fetched is indicated by an incident at the opening of the McVay court-martial. The assistant judge advocate, asked for his own initials, referred a reporter to the Navy public relations officer!

Veterans Benefits

It is good to know, as Bernard M. Baruch has reported to Senator Edwin C. Johnson, that "in the main the provisions enacted by Congress for American veterans are more liberal than comparable programs in the other countries." They ought to be. The United States is the wealthiest of the nations considered in the Baruch survey and has probably suffered least, economically, from participation in the war. Mr. Baruch's report, another in the series of useful studies he has made respecting veterans' problems in the reconversion period, compares the benefits accorded veterans under seven major programs in six Allied countries—Australia, Canada, Britain, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa and the United States.

The American benefits are by no means the most liberal in all categories. In respect to mustering-out payments, for example, we stand at the bottom of the list. We give discharged servicemen who have had more than six months' service a flat sum of $300 if a portion of their time has been spent overseas, $200 if they served only in this country. All the other countries studied by Mr. Baruch maintain a graduated scale of discharge payments based upon length of service and to some extent upon dependency. In Canada and New Zealand, these payments average more than double the sums granted over here.

It does not seem to us, however, that the comparative smallness of our mustering-out pay necessarily represents any niggardliness or even any deficiency in our veterans' program. As Mr. Baruch warns, none of the facets of the program can be appraised independently; each merges into the others. We do rather better than our allies when it comes to unemployment benefits and to educational allowances. And we provide the most generous arrangements for hospitalization and pensioning of disabled veterans.

But to most servicemen, no doubt, the principal benefit desired is fair economic opportunity. "Job reinstatement laws of other countries," Mr. Baruch observes, "seem more explicit than ours. Most countries assure the veteran the same rights that would have been his had he stayed on the job and not entered the service." It seems to us, as we have noted on other occasions, that this is all that can reasonably and justly be assured to servicemen. And the attempt of our own Selective Service director to give them the illusory advantage of "superseniority" can lead only to frustration and to needless friction with fellow workers who stayed at home.

The test of all these guarantees to veterans lies, of course, in their application. They must be implemented by vigorous administration, by a real will to give them practical effect. The key to such administration, as Mr. Baruch himself pointed out long ago, must be the "single, unforgetful mind" under which he envisaged the coordination of all efforts to integrate veterans into the social and economic life of the country. We have had no such mind at work. It remains the veterans' greatest need.

Strike Move

Nearly six weeks ago The Post suggested that the President appoint a fact-finding board to investigate the dispute that was then threatening to bring about a major strike in the automobile industry. Yesterday President Truman followed precisely that course, though his action came 13 days after the strike had begun. At the same time, the President recognized the value of the fact-finding technique in averting strikes by announcing that he will name a similar emergency board to investigate the dispute in the steel industry. Apparently he delayed action in the automobile industry in the hope that the Labor-Management Conference would recommend machinery for the settlement of wage disputes.

"We think," said the same editorial, "the President should be given statutory authority to appoint such boards whenever industrial disputes assume national importance." Mr. Truman has also requested precisely that authority. He asks Congress to authorize him to appoint emergency fact-finding boards whenever the Secretary of Labor certifies that a dispute continues in spite of his efforts and that a stoppage of work would vitally affect the public interest. The proposed boards would properly be granted power to subpena individuals and records. They would be required to make their reports, with recommendations, within 20 days. Strikes or lockouts within that period and for five days following would be unlawful. Working conditions during the waiting period would remain the same as before.

There is no compulsion in this plan, except the restraint required during the fact-finding period. Neither party would be bound to accept the recommendations of the fact-finding board. But, as President Truman pointed out, the public would know the facts. A strike or lockout in defiance of the board's advice would probably be doomed to failure for want of public sympathy.

This formula is not, of course, a panacea for all labor disputes. Our editorial of October 26 pointed out that "the emergency board technique must be reserved for genuine national emergencies such as that now threatening." President Truman said yesterday, "I believe that the procedure should be used sparingly, and only when the national public interest requires it." But it is a lever of great importance in cases of national emergency. We think there should be no hesitation whatever on the part of Congress in giving the President this useful authority.

Nor can it reasonably be said that the President needs no additional authority because he has already acted in two cases without it. The fact-finding boards he has appointed to investigate the automobile and steel industry disputes will lack some of the prestige and power that boards set up under the proposed law would have. For example, they cannot subpena individuals or records. Nor are workers required to refrain from striking in the period of inquiry, as they would be under the proposed legislation.

Both labor and management, in our opinion, should nevertheless hasten to cooperate with this sensible plan to avert further disruption of the reconversion program. It does not by any means promise a complete righting of what is wrong with labor relations in the United States. But it is a constructive and courageous step forward, worthy of full support in Congress as well as in the ranks of industry and labor.

Consumer Credit

A banker correspondent takes us to task, in a letter elsewhere on this page for advocating permanent retention of controls over consumer credit. We can well understand why an official connected with an industrial bank might favor immediate abolition of the existing controls over consumer credit, since the sharp declines in such credits (chiefly to finance purchases on the instalment plan) have hit lending agencies of this type with exceptional severity. We also sympathize with those who complain that restrictions on consumer credit are especially hard on returning veterans and other would-be buyers of automobiles and home furnishings who have not had opportunity to pile up cash reserves for postwar spending.

Nevertheless, so long as inflationary pressures remain strong—and they will be strong as long as surplus purchasing power continues to be available for use in markets short of goods—restrictions on consumer credit serve a useful purpose. Granted that a man with cash on hand has an advantage as a buyer over one dependent on credit, it seems doubtfully kind to the cashless ones to encourage them to contract debts in order that they may compete for goods that are still extremely scarce, thereby adding to the upward pressure on prices.

It is true, as our correspondent states, that the amount of consumer credit at its prewar peak was "pitifully small" compared with increases in wage income or in the public debt. But consumer credit has been a far from insignificant factor in normal peace years in stimulating demand for certain types of durable goods such as automobiles and household equipment. In the last full prewar year, 1940, for instance, the volume of consumer credit exceeded 9 billion dollars, whereas the entire volume of commercial bank business credit then outstanding was not quite 11 billion. Why should such a large segment of the credit field be removed entirely from the control of the Federal Reserve authorities while quantitative and, to a limited extent, selective controls are applied to other types of credit operations?

Admittedly, control methods applicable to consumer credit differ from traditional methods of credit control. For interest charges constitute a relatively unimportant part of the operating costs of specialized consumer financing agencies and an even smaller part of the monthly payments made by instalment borrowers. Nevertheless, by varying the percentage of down payments required on commodity instalment purchase loans and by shortening or lengthening the period for repayment, controls can be established. We see no reason why the Federal Reserve authorities should not be authorized by law to employ such control devices, either as a means of helping to curb peacetime buying booms of an unhealthy nature or, contrariwise, as a means of stimulating buying when business is slack. By thus alternately checking or liberalizing credit terms for consumers, efforts to stabilize general business activity would be aided.

To suggest, as our correspondent does, that these powers might be exercised to force private business to acquiesce in unsound credit practices is far-fetched. Arguments of this tenor, based on the assumption that control powers granted to the Federal Reserve authorities would be abused, imply that all official efforts to control credit activities constitute a threat to business instead of being a form of protection against business excesses. We think that our correspondent is raising up bogies when he implies that consumer credit control may be an entering wedge leading to progressive socialization of private business, including the press.

Goering's Confession

There was a great deal of deceptive candor in the answers to questions submitted to Goering by the Associated Press last week. Fully aware no doubt that it was a little late for him to plead, as so many other high-placed officials of the erstwhile Third Reich have pleaded, that he had never really been a Nazi at all, Goering boldly expressed his continued loyalty to Hitler. "I consider myself," he said, "a true paladin of the Fuehrer. I was a disciple and follower." Back of this confession, however, there was a fairly transparent attempt at self-exculpation.

If Goering's statement is taken at face value, and to do that literally tons of evidence would have to be disregarded, he was a Nazi with a difference, no crass brutalitarian like Himmler, no radical like Bormann. He, Goering, never desired aggressive war and "did everything possible to prevent the outbreak of war." He admitted it was he who had first set up concentration camps in Germany. But he never dreamed they would be used for the purposes they were used. He never knew, until he saw the films, that such horrible things were happening there. Nor was he ever in harmony with the manner and extent to which anti-Semitism had been put in practice in the Reich.

Only those who insist on closing their eyes to the facts will accept Goering's estimate of himself as a boy instead of a brute, a bluff, hearty, well-meaning, patriotic fellow with no evil intentions. With only a small part of the grisly Nazi record yet brought out in the open at the Nuernberg trial, his coresponsibility for the horrible activities of Hitler and his henchmen is already too plain to be subject to any qualification or extenuation.

Greatest Gift

Some of the most princely bequests ever made are coming these days from men, women and even children who die almost devoid of worldly possessions. What they give is sight to the blind. Indeed, even a wealthy person may bring greater happiness into the life of some fellowman by leaving the corneas of his eyes to an eye bank than by the disposition of all his funds and property.

Modern surgery has made it possible to transfer these precious windows of the eyes from a person just dead to another who is living without sight because his corneas have become clouded or otherwise damaged. So successful have the eye surgeons become in making the transfer that the eye banks have been established to take and preserve every cornea available. But the banks never acquire large deposits. Many blind persons are waiting for every cornea that is available. We suspect that as knowledge of these banks spreads, the gifts will be greatly increased in number. For in this way those who are departing can, without any loss to themselves or loved ones, bestow upon an unfortunate fellow the greatest gift of life.

WISDOM

Put not your trust in youthe
The beautiful, the frail,
Whose hard heart knows no ruth,
Whose strength will not avail.

Nor put your trust in fate
The fickle jade, unkind,
Will leave you while you wait,
To whistle down the wind.

And-oh, in love trust not,
There deepest will you drown—
By narrow seas forgot,
The dreams of men go down.

But put your trust in death,
Him, pin your hopes upon;
Fairer than anxious breath

New Policy On Labor

By Merlo Pusey

Gets Green Light

IF A CONFERENCE of landlords and tenants should fail to work out a satisfactory housing code, no one would be surprised. By the same token, angry complaints because the Labor-Management Conference failed to devise a formula for the settlement of industrial disputes seem out of place. The surprising thing is that any reliance was placed on the ability of antagonistic interests to outline an important public policy.

The Labor-Management Conference was called because Government was not ready to face its own responsibilities. Various groups in Congress as well as the Administration had been unwilling to face the delicate task of amending the law and setting up governmental machinery to convert collective bludgeoning into collective bargaining. They attempted to farm out their own responsibility to representatives of the contending factions. From the beginning that was an unsound governmental procedure. In addition it has proved to be futile.

Government did not wait for management and labor to work out a policy when the Wagner Labor Relations Act was passed. Now that the Wagner Act is in need of amendment and new legislation must be passed to guide the collective-bargaining process into constructive channels, Government must again take the lead. President Truman's recognition of this fact is probably the most significant aspect of his message to Congress yesterday. Advice and criticism may reasonably be asked from labor and management groups, but the primary obligation for national policy making falls upon the Administration and Congress.

IT IS QUITE conceivable that if labor and management groups had been able to evolve a formula for the peaceful settlement of industrial disputes it would have been unsatisfactory from the viewpoint of the public. Many large business and labor groups were not represented at the conference. Certainly the public had no representation. In short, it is utterly impractical to rely upon a handful of business and labor leaders to formulate a public policy.

Now that this truism has been so pointedly emphasized, it is time for the molders of public policy to hold a conference of their own. That conference might be very informal. It would have to include the top officials of the Labor Department and of the Senate and House committees dealing with labor. It would work in close consultation with the President and with the key leaders in Congress. It would bring to its assistance such experts in the sphere of labor relations as William M. Leiserson and Donald R. Richberg. Of course, it would also give weight to the wishes of organized labor, organized industry and the unorganized public.

The task of this conference of officials and legislators would be to agree upon a national policy concerning labor disputes and to draft a bill embodying that policy. It would not have to start from scratch. Several elaborate bills on the subject are already before Congress. The Hatch-Burton-Ball bill is a product of extensive research, discussion and compromise. A much milder measure has the joint support of Senators McMahon, Tunnell and Elbert D. Thomas. Now the President's own recommendations have been added.

THE TROUBLE in the past has been that no legislation on this subject has had Administration support, and without such leadership Congress has merely grumbled and fumbled. Now President Truman has asked specifically for legislation applying some of the principles of the Railway Labor Act to our great Nation-wide industries. That is a good start. It provides a green light for Congress to go to work on the problem. In doing so Congress should necessarily have the extensive advice of the Labor Department and labor relations experts.

The President has asked Congress to act in haste to meet an emergency. But the element of emergency has been largely eliminated by his appointment of special fact-finding boards to look into the existing disputes in the automobile and steel industries. If Congress is going to enact a comprehensive bill, it will need time to formulate it carefully and discuss it thoroughly.

An informal conference of legislators and officials, or a joint hearing before the House and Senate Committees on Labor, might well result in a bill that would win general support. In any event, the President has done well to bring this problem out of the realm of bickering between interested parties and into the realm of public policy-making where it belongs. What remains is to work out a policy that will be satisfactory to the President, Congress and the public, and that will reqrire a highly cooperative effort.

Roach Control

While the problem of rat control is being agitated, why not bring in "roach control" too, especially for many Washington restaurants and hotels.

The Great Dilemma

By Barnet Nover

"Big Five" And Sovereignty

SO FAR NO RUSSIAN leader has publicly commented on the statement made by Anthony Eden in the House of Commons on November 22 that in this day of atomic energy old-time concepts of sovereignty have become nonsensical and the great power veto in the United Nations Organization has become an anachronism.

Unofficially but very pointedly, however, Russian spokesmen have rejected such views. The Soviet Union, they have made it clear, is determined to stand on the Charter as it is.

Thus, Pravda, organ of the Communist Party, declared in a recent issue that those who advocate a world parliament or a world government and those who would do away with the veto are undermining the basis of the Charter whose efficacy "lies in the collaboration of the great powers that are responsible for the preservation of peace."

The basis of that collaboration, Pravda went on to say, is to be found in the principle of unanimity among those great powers.

SO FAR AS the Charter is concerned, Pravda's point is well-taken.

The Charter will succeed or fail depending on whether the great powers manage to adjust their differences and work in harmony or fail to do so.

This was clearly recognized both in the Dumbarton Oaks discussions and at the San Francisco Conference. The underlying assumption then was that it would be possible to achieve five-power harmony in time of peace as it had proved to be during the war.

In this particular, certainly, the United Nations Charter does represent an improvement over the old League of Nations Covenant.

In the Covenant power was concentrated as it is now—in the hands of a few strong nations. But responsibility was diffused. In the Charter responsibility has been made commepsurate with power.

WHAT IS NOT at all clear is that the "Big Five" can cooperate in the spirit of the Charter or, for that matter, cooperate at all.

So far, certainly, the outlook for such cooperation does not appear to be too bright. In whatever direction one looks the picture is one of conflict and confusion.

That is true in Germany, in China, in Iran. The fact of disharmony is vividly demonstrated in the dismal failure of the "Big Five" to draw up the terms of peace with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary, Finland. Indeed, practically every recent development suggests that neither harmony nor the approach to harmony has been achieved among those great powers.

GIVEN THE FACT of the veto, then, the United Nations Organization would seem to be doomed to powerlessness from the start.

It used to be said of the old league that it was only capable of dealing with the large affairs of small powers and the small affairs of large powers. But under existing circumstances it is difficult to see how UNO can operate at all. Yet with all its failings and inadequacies UNO represents the hope of mankind.

That is why, even before it has actually come into being, even before there has been a single meeting of the Assembly or the Security Council people in many lands are demanding that UNO be made stronger. They hope that something can be done to enable it to circumvent those crippling provisions that make it so completely and utterly dependent on a circumstance altogether outside its control, namely, great power relationships.

TO BREAK the present impasse what is clearly needed is a meeting of minds among the "Big Five." But merely to state that proposition is, in the framework of the present world situation, to demonstrate its difficulty.

The impasse can be broken either through capitulation or through compromise. So far as the United States is concerned, and the same seems to be true of Great Britain, the day when anything went so long as it preserved the fiction of harmony is over. Compromise is always possible. But compromise cannot be on the basis anticipated by Cyrus Sulzberger in a discussion in the New York Times on Soviet policy in eastern Europe and Asia.

"Nobody need be surprised," he wrote, "if that excellent bargaining technique which Moscow—after all geographically an extension to the north from the Middle East, home of bazaar trading—gets another compromise which seems to be worked out on this subject: 'Let's have a meeting of minds, with you meeting me nine-tenths of the way.'"

Any compromise between Russia and the other powers that would have any value at all must be on a real give-and-take basis and must be in line with the treaties, agreements and pledges already entered into by all the powers.

THE SETTING for the meeting of the United Nations Assembly next month does not under existing circumstances appear too rosy.

In one vital particular, however, UNO, powerless as it may be to act on the great issues troubling the world can nonetheless still serve a great purpose.

There is nothing to prevent it from serving as the sounding board of world opinion, the conscience of mankind. The fact that the Assembly will have before it the problem of the atomic bomb can make that role a truly vital one.

Consumer Credit

In your editorial column for November 16 there appeared an article on consumer credit. It handles a subject, on which experts disagree, in a somewhat superficial way. This kind of handling is not characteristic of The Washington Post and as such provokes comment.

You point out that the imposition of restrictions on consumer credit discouraged the buying of articles in short supply for civilian use in the early war period. This is conceded. It was a justifiable step but only because it could be quickly implemented while price control and rationing required tedious preparation. Because control of consumer credit restricted the increasingly scarce supply of durable consumer goods to that part of the population which had cash in hand, conversely deprived those who probably needed the goods more but had less cash assets of their fair share, it was not a democratic means of meeting the problem. Price control and rationing were the proper means of accomplishing this objective. From the standpoint of relieving pressure on scarce goods, there has been no excuse for regulating consumer credit since they became effective.

Quantitatively, the control over consumer credit is admitted to have had very little effect upon the inflationary pressures. The total amount of consumer credit at its peak was pitifully small by comparison to either the annual budget, or the increases in wage income, or the Government debt. It continues to be undemocratic and shortsighted to hamper the consumer credit customer with restrictions in a period when every device for easing and increasing credit to large and small industry and to veterans is being pushed. Proponents of such a policy ignore the obvious fact that a large proportion of the American people have not profited by the war expenditures and have not shared in the tremendous amount of cash now in circulation.

You suggest that consumer credit under Government control might be used to stimulate business in depression periods. Just where would you apply the brakes to keep an instrumentality of Government from favoring such progressively liberal terms of credit in an effort to stave off depression that private business could not comply with them and still conform to sound credit practices? You will not have to look too far back for precedent. What would keep the refusal of private business to accede to suggestins of unduly liberal credit in such a period from being used as the basis for further Government intrusion into the whole credit field?

In short, does The Washington Post advocate Government credit, with its inescapable political tinge, as means better calculated to improve the standard of the American people than has been the traditional American way? If The Post does advocate an increasing instrusion of the Government upon consumer banking, is that the only private business which it would socialize, or would it extend the blessings to other businesses—such as the press?

Historically, it has been not a lack of abundance of consumer durables, but a failure of sufficiently widespread distribution which has proven the bottleneck in our cycle of prosperity. Consumer credit is a key to wider distribution within the framework of private business. As such, it would be particularly fitting that it should be released from regulations at a time when the war controls are being relaxed in a studied effort to stimulate reconversion and prosperity.

World Government

The false premise that is crippling our foreign policy today is the delusion that atomic or bacteriological armaments are somehow intrinsically different from all armaments, and hence require a different diplomatic approach. The sooner we realize that the per capita cost and total number of men under arms throughout the Soviet Union are no more susceptible to control by the Congress of the United States than is the atom bomb, the sooner we will perceive that these various problems of national security are all inter-related and that they cannot be solved piecemeal and without regard for consistent principle. If the experience of World War II has taught us anything, it must surely have taught us that the only way to attain national security in an interdependent world is to attain collective security.

Washington Calling

Mission To Siberia

HISTORY IS REPEATING itself with a vengeance. At times you have the impression of watching an old newsreel that shows the same pattern of mistakes and disasters.

Few Americans today remember that after World War I we had an expeditionary force of American soldiers in Siberia. One of America's strangest military ventures, it might well have drawn us into a futile war against the Bolsheviks that would have proved costly in lives and dollars.

While the parallel with the situation in China today is not by any means exact, it is close enough to be an object lesson for those who would learn from history. In 1919, as in 1945, we were divided over the policy to be followed.

IN THAT EARLIER time it was the State Department that wanted to intervene actively in Russia's civil war. If it had not been for the steadfast integrity of an American commander in Siberia, one of the numerous plots hatched to involve Uncle Sam more deeply in Russia's internal quarrel might have succeeded.

That commander was Maj. Gen. William S. Graves. Years later, when more of the background information was available, General Graves wrote a book called "America's Siberian Adventure," in which he told the whole story.

Written with the almost transparent honesty of a soldier determined not to exceed orders clearly stating that he was not to intervene in Russia's internal quarrel, it is a fascinating narrative of intrigue.

The Japanese, the British and the French all wanted to get the United States committed to a wholesale war that would have as its objective putting down bolshevism. By every possible means, their representatives tried to get Graves and his command into the scrap.

Without any prior background in diplomacy, the American outsmarted them. This was largely because General Graves, in spite of the propaganda howls about the Bolsheviks, was not deceived as to the facts of what was happening in Siberia.

The Japanese, of course, had the biggest stake. They had an army of more than 70,000 men in Siberia, in spite of an agreement with the United States which said the limit would be 12,000. The Japs hoped to stir up so much trouble that eventually they would end up in full possession of a slice of eastern Siberia including, perhaps, the vital port of Vladivostok.

The Japs were supplying munitions and money to certain notorious Cossack chieftains who were guilty, as Graves was able to prove over and over again, of the most horrible atrocities against the peasantry. The British were backing Czarist Admiral Kolchak, who was not quite so bad. But Kolchak went about it in exactly the way to alienate any popular support he might have obtained from the Russian people.

At the very time Kolchak's armies were collapsing, with wholesale desertions to the Bolsheviks, United States diplomatic representatives in Washington and in the Far East were trying to get our government to recognize the Kolchak regime as the government of Russia.

Woodrow Wilson had sent Graves and his troops to Siberia for the stated purpose of helping a wandering army of Czechoslovaks get to Vladivostok and from there across the Pacific and home. The instructions handed Graves by Secretary of War Newton D. Baker specifically said he was not to intervene in any way in Russia's internal quarrel. Graves stuck to his instructions and used his troops only to guard the Trans-Siberian Railroad, over which the Czechs would have to travel. Even so, American lives were lost, most of them, according to Graves, at the hands of the Cossack bandits backed by Japan.

"I WAS NOT surprised, but none the less gratified," General Graves wrote in conclusion, "that the American officers and enlisted men were, almost to a man, firm believers in the traditional policy of the United States, as old as the Government itself, that all countries should settle their own differences, without interference of the United States soldier. Misrepresentations of the American troops, as well as the cry of 'bolshevism' did not swerve the American officer or soldier from his conception of what was right and just."

Back home, of course, there were newspapers and public officials who were denouncing Graves for his failure to join in the crusade, because of the historical background that led up to Russia's civil war, Graves knew very well. He refused to budge and he had the backing all along of his Chief of Staff, Gen. Peyton C. March, who was equally steadfast in spite of an intrigue between Military Intelligence in the War Department and the State Department.

It's too bad that Graves' book is out of print. A great many Americans today could read that record of an honest soldier with profit.

10 Overcome By Gas Fumes In Va. Nursery

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 3 (AP).—Six of ten persons—two women and eight small children—overcome from what was believed to be escaping fumes from a gas radiator in the nursery of the Tabernacle Baptist Church in Roanoke County yesterday, were hospitalized overnight.

The 10 were brought to a hospital here after lifesaving crews, called to the church when parents entered the nursery to get their children after the Sunday morning worship service, had revived the two women and four of the children. Four of the children were unconscious when brought to the hospital.

One of the women told the pastor, the Rev. Edwin M. Vaughn, last night that the gas radiator had been shut off when the room became too warm, and that they attempted to relight the radiator when the room became too cool and were overcome while doing so.

Auto Fumes Fatal To Man; Girl Saved

Frederick, Md., Dec. 3 (AP).—By the margin of half an hour, Miss Ann Beachley, 17, of Frederick, is alive today.

Dr. R. W. Baer, county medical examiner, said that only half an hour was between Miss Beachley and death from carbon monoxide poisoning yesterday.

At 2:50 p. m. yesterday, Charles Snyder of Frederick, noticed her in a car in a lonely Frederick street. The motor was running. He summoned police.

Lieut. Reno Six said that when police and volunteer firemen arrived they found Richard E. Cooke, 24, of Church Hill, near Frederick, dead in the car and Miss Beachley near death. Firemen revived her after an hour's work and she was taken to Frederick Hospital where she is recovering.

Dr. Baer said she would have been dead in another half an hour. He said that Cooke, a well-known local baseball and softball catcher, died of monoxide poisoning between midnight and 6 a. m. Sunday.

Yamashita Asks Supreme Court To Stop Trial by Army Board

By the Associated Press

Papanese Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita yesterday asked the Supreme Court to stop his trial before an American military commission in Manila and to bring him to Washington for a hearing before the high tribunal.

He also asked a "writ of prohibition," prohibiting continuation of his trial as a war criminal. He requested that the high court order him returned to the status of prisoner of war "in conformity with provisions of the Geneva Convention."

Charged With Contradiction

Manila, Dec. 9 (U.P.).—General Yamashita, former Japanese commander in the Philippines, was charged tonight with contradicing his own testimony on the crimes for which Japanese authorities would sentence Filipino guerillas to death.

Chief Prosecutor Maj. Robert M. Kerr attacked Yamashita's assertion that "in certain cases, persons contributing money to the guerillas could be sentenced to death.

"You're changing your testimony," said Kerr. "Before, you said you absolutely could not sentence to death persons contributing."

"The other time I was speaking generally," Yamashita explained, blandly. "Tonight, I am speaking specifically."

Special Session Called

Maj. Gen. R. B. Reynolds, president of the American Military Commission trying Yamashita, called a special session to "straighten out" complications after Hideo Nishiharu, chief of the Japanese judge advocates section in the Philippines, also had confused both prosecution and defense by his statements on Yamashita's responsibility for executing Filipino guerillas.

In the afternoon, thre defense recalled Yamashita to the stand and asked him whether the commanding general of the Shimbu Army, one of the Japanese armies in the Philippines, had jurisdiction to sentence American prisoners of war and civilian internees, tried by a Shimbu Army court martial without consulting Yamashita.

"Yes, they could and did carry out death sentences," said Yamashita.

Rare Coincidence Noted in County's Victory Loan Drive

Farmville, Va., Dec. 3 (AP).—O. H. Whitten, county chairman for the Victory Loan committee, believes he has run across the top oddity of the season.

In checking the figures on "E" bond sales made in Prince Edward County, as reported by the Federal Reserve Bank in Richmond, Whitten discovered this coincidence, which he has described in a letter to the Federal Reserve Bank in Richmond, as follows:

"When I received sheet No. 13 (from the Federal Bank) in the Victory Loan drive, I compared it with sheet No. 13 of the Seventh War Loan drive to ascertain how E bond sales were stacking up with the previous drive. Both of these sheets, one dated November 16, 1945, and the other May 22, 1945, show the total number of sales for the first 13 days of the Seventh War Loan drive and the Victory Loan drive are the same, to the penny, namely $49,368,75, for 'E' bonds.

"If I lived for a thousand years and were continuously conducting war loan drives, we would never duplicate sales under these circumstances."

Program to Fete Norfolk Grocer

Richmond, Va., Dec. 3 (AP).—Virginia today was credited with having "the National Retail Food Bond Salesman," the War Finance Committee from Virginia announced.

He is Elias Codd, who operates a delicatessen store in Norfolk. Codd, a native of Latvia, to date has sold $3,200,000 in War and Victory bonds and stamps, a total unequaled by any other grocer in the United States, committee officials said. He is reported to have sold $100,000 worth of bonds and stamps thus far in the Victory loan.

Codd's selling feat will be given recognition over a nationally broadcast radio program from Chicago tomorrow at 7:30 a. m.

How do you picture "markets" in Mexico?

Every village and town in Mexico has its picturesque mercado, the delight of tourists, where local craftsmen sell pottery, textiles, jewelry and other wares.

But Mexican "markets" mean something very different to our manufacturers . . . they mean a great demand for cars, tractors, radios, electrical apparatus and industrial machinery.

In return our country is a market for many Mexican products vital to our economy—important minerals, such as lead, copper, zinc, antimony—as well as oil, rubber and essential fibres.

Yearly export-import trade with Mexico exceeded $170,000,000 before the war—much of it transported by water. For well over a half century Cuba Mail has carried great cargoes between the ports of the United States and Mexico, and thousands of cruise passengers besides.

Today we are looking ahead to the time when our ships can sail back to their old routes, and our trained staffs can return to the task they know so well—fostering increased trade and travel between our country and our good neighbor Mexico!

Witness Says He Lost $2500 To Curley Engineer Group

John W. Powers, Cambridge, Mass., building contractor, testified in District Court yesterday that he lost $2500 to Engineers' Group, Inc., in August, 1941, when he withdrew from an agreement with that organization.

Powers is the fourth alleged victim of Engineers' Group to testify in the Government's case against Representative James M. Curley, (D., Mass.), former president of the organization, and four other officers. They are charged with mail fraud, claiming to be engineers with special facilities for obtaining Government contracts for clients.

Powers testified, according to the United Press, that the $2500 was part of a $30,000 fee to be paid to Engineers' Group following the signing of a contract by his company with the American Road Builders Association.

He was told, he said, that the association was putting up a building on Pennsylvania ave. known as the Hamilton National Bank project. It was to cost not more than $379,000.

Powers identified an agreement which he had made with James G. Fuller, one of the defendants, stipulating that the fee was to be held as security until a contract was completed.

Powers said when he returned home from Washington, however, conditions made it desirable for him to withdraw from the agreement. He sai dhe asked his bank to stop payment on his check of $2500 to engineers' group but that the bank paid the check by mistake.

He said he talked to Fuller over the telephone, explaining to him why he was obliged to withdraw from the agreement. Fuller said he would return the check immediately but it never was returned, Powers testified.

He said he later recovered the money from the bank, however, because it had honore dthe check by mistake. It was not brought out whether the bank ever recovered the money from engineers' group.

Powers said he found out about engineers' group through David E. Desmond, Boston, to whom he was introduced by a subcontractor. Desmond introduced him to Curley, he said, who told him engineers' group had several contracts for which it needed builders.

Frank M. Gifford of Worcester, Mass., president of a New York contracting firm, said he also was introduced to engineers' group through Desmond.

Educators Say Military Traini Plan Spurs Armaments Race

Organized educators told the House Military Committee yesterday adoption of universal military training as a peacetime policy "would lead straight to war."

Their views were voiced by Dr. Ralph McDonald, an official of the National Education Association, with a membership of 733,409 educators. He testified:

"If we adopt compulsory military training as a peacetime policy, with all that must of necessity go with that policy, was is then but a matter of time.

"When nations are all armed to the teeth, using threats or a show of military strength to influence international affairs, war is inevitable. . . . Already the United States has started a worldwide armaments race."

Dr. H. S. Bender, assistant secretary of the Mennonite Central Committee, Nappanee, Ind., opposed universal training. He urged that if it is adopted, provision be made for the exemption of conscientious objectors or for completely non-military civilian direction" for such persons.

Another Big Order for Martin!

Eastern Airlines Orders Fleet of Martin 202 Transports!

Eastern Airlines has signed for a fleet of 50 new Martin Two-O-Two Airliners, the second major airline to place orders for these swift, luxurious transport planes. Construction of the ultra-modern Martin 202 transports will cost approximately $10,000,000. And these orders are just a beginning! During 1947 Martin expects to be turning out these advanced airliners at a rate of 50 a month.

Constantly expanding its operations, Eastern now flies more than 8,300 miles of domestic air routes and expects to expand this mileage many times over with new domestic and foreign services. Eastern is currently flying more than two and a half million plane miles a month . . . and Captain Rickenbacker believes the system will be flying 12 to 15 million miles a month within a few years. There's a big job facing the Martin 202's when they join the Great Silver Fleet!

"Our engineers have made a long and close study of planes being offered for near-term deliveries by manufacturers and they have concluded that the 202 is the best in its class." Captain Rickenbacker said, "The high speed, convenience and simplified maintenance of these aircraft are especially attractive to us." Such enthusiastic "O.K.'s" stamp the Martin 202 as the most outstanding plane of its class. Martin sets the pace for postwar air travel!

House Passes Extension on 2d Powers Act

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate legislation extending most provisions of the second War Powers Act—including rationing and priorities over scarce materials—until June 30, 1946.

The Powers otherwise would expire at the end of this year.

The voice vote on passage was unanimous.

The bill would end immediately the Government's power to seize real estate before starting condemnation proceedings.

Extended for six months would be:

Emergency powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission over coastal water carriers and motor vehicles.

Priorities powers, including rationing (now limited to sugar); allocation and conservation of scarce materials, and commitments to supply foreign nations with materials.

Authorization of the Federal Reserve Banks to buy up to five billion dollars of Government obligations.

Waiver of navigation and inspection laws.

Exemption of part-time Government employes from provisions of the Hatch Act, which prohibits Federal employes from engaging in political activity.

Acceptance of gifts made directly to the Government for furtherance of the war effort, with an amendment confining the acceptances to gifts made for the benefit of members of the armed forces.

The collection and exchange of various statistical information among various branches of the Government.

In reporting the legislation unanimously, the House Judiciary Committee said it was "the determination of Congress" to recapture the war powers granted the Executive Department "as speedily as may be wise, for the people, so that they may be again exercised in accordance with the slower but more desirable processes of democracy."

House Gets Bill Protecting Aides Who Served in War

A bill to protect the future civil service eligibility of legislative Government employes who served in the armed forces was reported favorably yesterday by the House Civil Service Committee.

Under the measure, persons who were employed in the legislative branch for a minimum of two years, and were separated in order to enter the armed forces shall be considered to have continued their civilian job.

Passed by the Senate September 14, the bill now goes to the House for action. Chairman Robert Ramspeck (D., Ga.), announced that his committee would meet again Thursday to consider the Vinson bill, which proposes a retirement system for members of Congress who wish such protection. He said several other minor bills would also be considered.

Alcoa Chairman Sees U. S. Plan To Split Firm Unsound Policy

Pittsburgh, Dec. 3, (AP).—Chairman Arthur V. Davis of the Aluminum Company of America said today the Department of Justice's aluminum program "is bound to destroy the growth possibilities of the aluminum industry" and sacrifice the chance to expand employment.

In a letter to Attorney General Tom C. Clark, the chairman asserted "it just doesn't make sense to seek military security by breaking up Alcoa in order to substitute for it a number of small and less efficient producers," he continued:

Thinks Thought Curious

"It is more than curious that there is a school of thought in the United States which would break up its most efficient producer of aluminum under the cloak of national defense, while our statesmen and military leaders are similarly breaking up the great aluminum companies of Germany and Japan in order to keep those nations permanently weak. We have yet to hear of any military authorities urging the breakup of Alcoa."

The letter was a reply to Attorney General Clark's report to Congress in September saying Alcoa should be split into a number of competing companies. Clark contended more competition in the aluminum industry is essential to national security and business.

"Both the purpose and effect of the plan of the Department of Justice," wrote Davis, "is to break up Alcoa because of its low cost of production and to substitute regional clusters of plants, each with costs and selling prices materially higher than those now in effect.

Must Have Markets

"This may meet the department's ideological objective of an Alcoa which cannot manufacture or sell cheaper than its competitors, but it seems to us that it destroys opportunity for either Alcoa or its competitors to create or capture those postwar markets which the aluminum industry must have in order to utilize the existing economical productive capacity and thereby expand employment."

Davis declared the "true road to competition does not lie in breaking up a highly efficient corporation like Alcoa but in finding someone willing to do what Alcoa has done, namely, invest money, time, enterprise and imagination in construction of an equally efficient company."

McCarran Asks World Air Lines Merger

By the Associated Press

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) introduced yesterday legislation to create a single, Government-supported international air transport company for operations outside the United States.

McCarran explained the measure is a substitute for previous proposals to merge all commercial lines flying international routes.

The substitute, he said, would permit railroads and steamship lines to participate in a company formed under the direction of the Civil Aeronautics Board. No company or individual could own more than 2 per cent of the proposed "All-American Flag Line" common stock under the terms of his measure.

McCarran declared that foreign nations will play one American company against another unless there is a consolidation of international carriers.

If the United States persists in a policy of competition in this field, McCarran told his colleagues, "We shall find ourselves in a very short time either squarely behind the eight-ball of international power politics or unwilling participants in a shot-gun wedding with foreign cartels."

Dr. Bush Says the Atomic Bomb Means the End of World War

By the Associated Press

Dr. Vannevar Bush expressed the cheering belief yesterday that "the atomic bomb means the end of world war."

The scientist who directed the development of this and other weapons as head of the National Defense Research Committee and the Office of Scientific Research and Development predicted it would take a long time to set up atomic controls.

But he told the special Senate committee on atomic energy that all the nations now want a long peace and this period can be used to develop the control machinery. He added that two nations armed with atomic bombs would not consider going to war against each other because the consequences would be "too terrible."

Sanctioned by Roosevelt

Senator Johnson (D., Colo.) observed that Dr. Bush's optimistic testimony was encouraging after the "gloomy Gus witnesses" who had made the committee room a "chamber of horrors."

Dr. Bush also reported that the decision to use the atomic bomb and new incendiaries against Japanese cities was made personally by the late President Roosevelt.

Dr. Bush said that his scientists developed the powerful incendiaries but there was some question about use of them against cities because they would kill so many civilians in order to destroy factories.

"The decision to use them was made by President Roosevelt," Dr. Bush said. "There was a serious problem in my mind and I was glad I did not have to make the decision."

Domestic Controls Needed

Dr. Bush said the same question of widespread civilian deaths attached to use of the atomic bomb but that he had no doubts about its use because "I knew it would end the war."

The scientist said the first task for the United States was to set up effective domestic controls as a pattern for possible world use of atomic energy. This would be a long and trying process, he added, requiring wisdom of the Congress and administrators placed in control under legislation.

Progress will be slow, Dr. Bush conceded, on the international side of control, but he noted that the easiest way to solve any difficult problem was to "attack at the point easiest of solution."

"There is no danger of war breaking out," he said. "We can't do it in a moment or by wishful thinking."

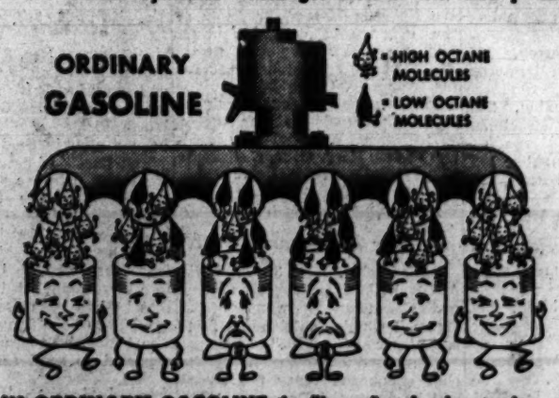
AND HERE'S THE REASON!

All gasolines (including Sunoco Dynafuel) are composed of "light" and "heavy" molecules. As the gasoline goes into the cylinders from the carburetor, some of the "heavy" molecules separate from the rest of the gasoline and go to certain cylinders which get most of the "heavy" molecules while other cylinders get mostly "light" molecules.

ORDINARY GASOLINE



IN ORDINARY GASOLINE the "heavy" molecules are low in octane quality.. but the "light" molecules are high octane. The cylinders receiving the low grade "heavy" molecules do not receive the same high knockless quality as other cylinders.

IN SUNOCO DYNAFUEL, all molecules, both "heavy" and "light" deliver equally high octane power. No matter whether a cylinder receives "light" or "heavy" molecules, that cylinder and all cylinders receive uniformly high knockless quality.

Miami U. to Play Holy Cross in Orange Bowl

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The trouble is, I'm misunderstood. According to the mail from Annapolis, I am (1) an Army man, (2) don't like Navy, (3) a dishonest reporter and (4) a scoundrel. The multiple fact is, I'm not an Army many, I do like Navy, try to be honest and am not quite a scoundrel.

POVICH

The midshipmen, who are quick to write letters at the drop of a hint that Navy's football team is not the best in the land, are displeased with my report of the Army-Navy game. I didn't give Navy enough credit, they say, for holding Army to a 32-13 score. Maybe I'm old fashioned. I always thought 32-13 was a pretty good beating, as football scores go.

All due credit to Navy for it's performance in the last three quarters when the Middies actually outscored Army, 13 points to 12. That was very commendable and demonstrated that Navy wasn't accepting defeat easily. They did match touchdowns in the last 45 minutes of play with the Nation's greatest football team, and if that feat wasn't properly accented in my account, maybe I am something of a scoundrel.

What the lads at Bancroft Hall didn't like, particularly, was my reference to the "Army jitters" which the Navy team appeared to take on the field with them. I'v seen other teams react to Army's presence on the same field this season with the same apparent nervousness that characterized Navy's play in the opening minutes. Not until the Middies recovered their composure did they play better football.

Navy's first kickoff was a weak item, and Army put the ball in play on its 44-yard line. Twice inside Navy's 24-yard line the Middies were so over-eager that Army benefited from two offside penalties in the first three minutes. And when Army kicked off following its first touchdown, the kick was fumbled in Navy's end zone. In fact, the first time Blanchard got a punt away, it was fumbled by Navy and there was no runback.

Navy punted twice in that first quarter and they were the kind of kicks to make Annapolis rooters tear their hair. The first was an out-of-bounds boot by Minisi that carried only 13 yards from the line of scrimmage, and a bit later when the Navy coaches sent Bob Kelly into the game for the specific purpose of improving Navy's punting average, he got off a boot that carried only 11 yards from the scrimmage line and gave Army the ball on Navy's 37. Four plays later, Army scored.

I got the impression Navy wasn't playing such hot football, except in the making of its two touchdowns. Certainly the 61-yard pass play, Bruce Smith to Clyde Scott in the last five seconds of the first half was a beaut, and Navy virtually took the Army line apart in scoring its third-quarter touchdown on a 26-yard drive, but otherwise it was a romp for Army.

I didn't mean to be harsh on Navy. I thought the Middies got their ears pinned back for most of the game. Certainly there was a tremendous contrast in the smooth operation of Army's T formation and Navy's. Quarterback Arnold Tucker of Army hoodwinked Navy completely by taking the ball three times for 22 yards, 20 yards and the last time for 5 yards inside the 8-yard line in Army's first touchdown march when the Middies were alerted to stop Blanchard and Davis.

There was no intent to indicate that Navy was outfought, but it was clear enough that Navy was out-played. Navy's pass protection was so weak that Bruce Smith was running for his life most of the afternoon while Tucker, in Army's passing role, was almost at leisure to get the ball away.

The prettiest play of the game when Scott's catch of Smith's long pass for a touchdown when he outmaneuvered Glenn Davis and raced to a touchdown. I caught mild hell from Bancroft Hall last week for suggesting that Davis was a faster man than Scott on the football field and when Davis failed to catch Scott on his touchdown dash, the Middies were quick to remind me of it .

Davis never did catch up with Scott on that race for the goal but I thought he was ganing on him with every stride and sort of proving which was the faster man. Apparently I was alone in that opinion. Al Laney, of the Herald-Thibune, who was sitting on the Army bench near the spot of the pass, reports:

"Davis had to stop and turn before taking out after Scott who had, as a consequence an 8-yard start . . . yet in 30 yards Davis almost caught up. Scott is rated a very fast man, said by some to be as fast as Davis. This one incident proved beyond doubt that no one playing football is as fast as Junior."

Penalized Lions Come Home To Face Falcons Tonight

The Washington Lions will resume their bitterest Eastern Hockey League feud tonight when they entertain the Philadelphia Falsons on Uline ice at 8:30 o'clock.

In their first appearance locally since 14 of their players were fined for an unsatisfactory performance against New York's Rovers here in last Friday's 11 to 3 rout, the Lions will be shooting for their initial victory in six starts against the Falcons.

The local starters have lost eight decisions thus far this season, four of these to the Falcons in early season. In a fifth start in Philadelphia last Saturday, they stalemated the Phils, 4-all, after having suffered a 3 to 0 deficit at one time.

Dogfight Likely

Tonight's match promises to resolve itself into a fight to a finish, with no punches pulled. The Falcons again will be sparked by Jimmy Wilson, Chirp Branchle and George Kelly, all forward and former Lions who have made life miserable for their old mates to date.

The Philadelphias also will unveil hot articles in Johnny Chenier and Gordon Brown, hot-handed wingmen; Hank (Dreamboat) D'Amore, rotund center and a supershowman, and 210-pound Joe Desson, bully boy defenseman and the Eastern League's bad boy of the ice.

Owner Mike Uline, just returned from a six week vacation in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., will witness his Lions in action for the first time tonight. He returned here yesterday and announced that he will spare no expense in helping Coach Maxie Bennett develop a winner for Washington.

Fennell Joins Club

The Lions tonight will introduce a newcomer in six foot, one inch, 190-pound defenseman Joe Fennell. The newest Lion recently was honorably discharged as a lieutenant in the Canadian Army, and will team up with Frank Mailley on defense. Capt. Hal Hursley and Alf Turner will form the other defense unit.

Rookie Mert Prophet, who has contributed sensational out-of-town performances in Baltimore, Boston and Philadelphia recently, will man the nets for Washington tonight. Philadelphia's alert Hal Kemp will oppose him.

Jones Quits As Coach Of Nebraska

Lincoln, Nebr., Dec. 3 (AP).—Col. Lawrence M. (Biff) Jones has resigned from the University of Nebraska coaching staff after being asked to return only as athletic director instead of the dual post—head coach and athletic director—which he held before the war.

This was disclosed today by release of an exchange of letters between the athletic board and Colonel Jones, who is now on war time leave as athletic director at West Point.

A November 13 letter from the board to the "Biffer" said in part: "Both boards (athletic board and board of regents) wish you to know that they would prefer to have you return as director of intercollegiate athletics only, and that the board of intercollegiate athletics proceed at once to engage a head coach who could report for duty not later than February 1."

Colonel Jones, under whose guidance the Cornhuskers went to the Rose Bowl in 1940, replied in a letter dated November 28:

"Please consider this as my resignation, effective this date, as head football coach and director of athletics at the University of Nebraska."

Four Linemen, 2 Backs Are Named For 'East' Eleven

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP).—Two halfbacks and four linemen have accepted bids to play on the East team in the East-West Shrine Hospital benefit football game at San Francisco on January 1, William M. Coffman of San Francisco, managing director of the game, announced here today.

The first of the members of the East squad to accept are:

Frank Sinadack, center, Columbia University; Nick Sacrinty, halfback, and Dave Harris, end, both of Wake Forest; Bob Dobelstein, guard, Tennessee; Mike Prashal, tackle, Michigan, and Allen Dekdebrun, halfback, Cornell.

The East team will be coached by Andy Kerr of Colgate, Bernie Bierman of Minnesota and Beattie Feathers of North Carolina State.

Trainer Jones Turns Duties Over to Son

BEN JONES

Miami, Fla., Dec. 3 (U.P.).—Plain Ben Jones, America's premier trainer of race horses, like some of his great turf stars has about decided to "put out to pacture" he said today.

"I'm not exactly retiring," Jones said. "But they tell me I've got to slow up a little and my son Jimmy Jones is going to take over the heavy work."

Jones, as trainer of the Calumet Stables, has saddled three Kentucky Derby winners, Lawrin in 1938, Whirlaway in 1941 and Pensive in 1944, and developed a number of other great campaigners.

"I guess it's about time for me to put out to pasture, even though I'm still going to spend as much time around the stables as possible," he said.

Top Money Winner

Whirlaway, the spectacular longtailed router, who set the all-time Kentucky Derby record of 2:01 2/5 for the mile and a quarter distrance, later went on to become the greatest money winner of all time, amassing $561,161 before being retired in 1943.

In 1944, after Whirlaway's retirement, Jones brought the Calumet stable the greatest winning return in turf history, $601,660 for a single year. Of this amount, $65,200 was won by Pensive in the Derby with the largest purse ever paid up to that year.

During three of the past five years the Calumet stable has won more races than any other in the Nation and ranks high this season despite the fact that the crop of Jones horses is not up to the usual standard. The erratic Pot O' Luck, which finished second in the Derby has been the most consistent money winner.

Armed Won "Special"

Jones' last major victory was in the Pimlico Special, the "blue ribbon" race for stake winners of other major classics and he won it with Armed, a horse that promises to become an outstanding star.

Illness kept Jones away from the track with a three-car shipment of horses and his son will arrive later in the week with another group to be stabled at the Hialeah race course. The string, owned by Warren Wright, baking powder heir, will race at Gulfstream Park.

'Skins Have 2 Shots at Playoff Game

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer.

Life today is indeed sweet for the Redskins even if this weekend's date with the New York Giants is coming up as a menace that cannot be taken as anything but serious.

Sunday's eventful happenings put the Redskins in a beautiful spot. After the Giants upset the Eagles and the local Tribe crushed the Pittsburgh Steelers, the Redskins found themselves in the unique spot of getting not one, but two shots at the Eastern Division championship and its subsequent jackpot of gold that goes with the league playoff game.

This year Cleveland already has clinched the Western Division title and the playoff game this season goes toi the Western city. And in Cleveland, where the citizens are going crazy over their first championship team, also is Municipal Stadium with a seating capacity of 82,000. Norte Dame and Navy played their memorable 6-6 tie on the same field.

$275,000 Melon

The largest crowd ever to see a championship playoff game is anticipated and the largest melon ever sliced is, naturally, to be expected. If the game is a sellout, around $275,000 plus the radio fee will be realized. Quick arithmetic, after expenses, show the players will cut something like $105,000 for the winning squad and around $65,000 for the losing club. Which isn't hay in any lingo.

All the Redskins have to do to declare themselves in on the pot of gold is to beat or tie the Giants Sunday. No matter what the Eagles do to the Boston Yanks will make any difference then. Should they lose and the Eagles win as expected, the Redskins have still another shot at the marbles December 16 when they would meet the Eagles.

What pleased the Redskin board of strategy most Sunday was the improved defensive play of the entire squad. Five times Steeler thrusts deep into Redskin territory were turned back, with Rookies Bob DeFruiter and Al DeMao playing prominent parts.

Two Classy Plays

Dick Todd and DeFruiter, incidentally, came through with the game's most spectacular plays outside of the two scoring gems of the Sammy Baugh-Steve Bagarus combination. DeFruiter's beautiful block on Jim Pense assured Bagarus of going all the way on the second 29-yard pass, while Todd's stunt of vaulting the Steeler line and throwing Buist Warren for a 3-yard loss prevented the Pittsburghers from scoring when they had reached the Redskin 1-foot line.

Todd's great defensive play was headwork as much as physical recklessness. He noticed the Steelers had been running plays on virtually the same count all afternoon and he gambled, timing his leap with the snap of the ball and really going back to Warren with the leather. Had the Steelers delayed the snap one count, Todd would have been offside. But he wasn't.

The Redskins came out of the rumpus without serious incident and will be at full strength for Sunday's joust with the vastly improved Giants. Today they start preparations after yesterday's usual Monday layoff.

Doc Blanchard Is Honored

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Doc Blanchard, Army's powerful fullback, today was named winner of the Heisman Memorial Trophy as the outstanding college football player for 1945. He polled a total of 860 points compared to 638 for his teammate, Glenn Davis.

The remainder of the voting gave Bob Fenimore of Oklahoma Aggies, 187; Herm Wedemeyer of St. Mary's 152; Harry Gilmer, Alabama 132; Frank Dancewicz, Notre Dame, 56; Warren Amling, Ohio State, 42; Pete Pihos, Indiana, 38.

Another Blanchard Award

Philadelphia, Dec. 3 (AP).—Felix A. (Doc) Blanchard succeeds teammate Glenn Davis as winner of the Maxwell Club's "outstanding football player of the year."

The board of governors of the club announced today the award will be presented December 15 to the line-smashing West Point fullback.

The Maxwell Club was established as a memorial to the late Bob Maxwell, sports editor of the old Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

Cubs to Start Free Training Camp for Returning GIs

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs, champions of the National League, will pioneer a special training base for GI's at no expense to returned soldiers to aid them in making a successful baseball comeback.

The plan, an innovation in major league baseball, was announced today. It provides for establishment of a camp at Lake Worth, Fla., to operate from January 15 through March 14.

Eligible to attend are any servicemen reinstated from the Cubs' list of 237 players on the National Defense List. Jack Sheehan, Cubs' farm system chief and director of the program, said 30 Cub-owned players already have been discharged from military service and the total may reach 100 or more before the camp opens.

The Cubs will pay all travel and boarding expenses for camp candidates and have arranged for housing at 67 private residences at Lake Worth with two to five players staying at each home.

Sheehan, who developed the program for the past two years, said it had the two-fold purpose of intensifying physical conditioning for war-slowed athletes and determining whether players who entered service from lower classification clubs improved enough in playing skill during military hitches to warrant promotions.

Also eligible to attend the camp are returned veterans who sign as fre agents with the Cubs or their 11 minor league farm clubs. These include:

Los Angeles (Pacific Coast League); Nashville (Southern Association); Tulsa (Texas League); Portsmouth (Piedmont League); Hagerstown, Md. (Interstate League); Davenport, Ia. (Three-Eye League); Visalia, Calif. (California League); Hutchinson, Kans. (Western Association); Statesville, N. C. (North Carolina State League); Elizabethtown, Ten. (Appalachian League), and Janesville, Wis. (Wisconsin State League).

Sheehan will supervise the camp, aided by a staff of baseball managers and coaches, headed by Larry Gilbert, pilot of the Nashville Vols.

Pirates Outdo Cards, Get Farm In Madrid

Pittsburgh, Dec. 3 (U.P.).—The St. Louis Cardinals gave up the honor of having baseball's most far-flung farm system today when the Pittsburgh Pirates disclosed they now have a club in Spain.

The Cards, of course, will settle for theirs, because no players are expected to move to Pittsburgh from the "Pirates club, Pelota Base, Narvaez, Madrid."

H. Audriado, president of Spain's first "baseball club," informed Pirate President Bill Benswanger that he had been named honorary president of the Spanish Swingers. The honored Benswanger was not expected to send scouts.

Boy, 14, Bags Deer as Md. Season Opens

By the Associated Press

Maryland's six-day deer-hunting season got underway today with 14-year-old Ralph Mason, jr., of Newark, Worcester County, bringing in a 160-pound kill. His father didn't bag a deer.

State Game Warden Ernest Vaughan said that so far 19 deer had been killed in Worcester County, the largest number county hunters have been known to kill in one day in the area. There are about 1000 animals in the 20-mile area.

Many hunters also were out in Garrett County, where the largest number of kills was reported last season. The first hunter to get a Frederick County deer today was Charles E. Shepley of Myersville.

A large force of extra deputies were in the field today under the direction of Chief Deputy Game Warden Richard T. Norris. Deer checking stations were established in six counties.

Only male deer or elk with two or more points to an antler are legal game during the six-day season. Each hunter is allowed only one deer or elk.

Hunting is allowed in Garrett, Allegany and Washington counties even if there is enough snow on the ground to permit tracking. In other Maryland counties, hunting is banned if the snow is deep enough for tracking.

Military ammunition is banned as well as automatic weapons which fire in bursts.

Vaughn said that with more plentiful ammunition and the many returning veterans taking to the woods again, he expected a record season.

Pat Welch, the erstwhile Irish Angel, who fought with the Army in Guadalcanal and other Pacific battles against the Japs, returns for the third straight week on tomorrow night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena, facing Jesse James, the Greek grappler, in a 30-minute bout. Headlining the show are Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame All-America footballer, and Don Lee, who campaign as the Masked Atom.

Bahram Sold

New York, Dec. 88 (AP).—Charles Lund, South American breeder of Buenos Aires, said today he had purchased the 13-year-old English stallion, Bahram, for $130,000 from an American syndicate headed by Alfred G. Vanderbilt. The syndicate purchased the stallion a decade ago for a reported $190,000.

Philadelphia Women Top Field Hockey

Bryn Mawr, Pa., Dec. 3 (AP).—The All-Philadelphia first team held the distinction of being the top women's field hockey team in the Nation today after holding three opponents scoreless in the national tournament, first held since Pearl Harbor.

The Quaker City No. 1 eleven drubbed Baltimore, 7-0, and edged West Jersey, 1-0, yesterday at the Bryn Mawr College field. Previously, the squad had upset Stuyvesant, N. Y., 9-0.

The All-Philadelphia Reserves (No. 2 team) and Virginia State also were undefeated in three starts in the two-day tournament, but the Philadelphia varsity's efficient team play and scoring prowess won top honors.

Tourney results included: Virginia, 4; Tri-State (northern New York and Rhode Island districts), 1. Virginia, 2; Washington, D. C., 0. Virginia, 3; New York, 1. Tri-State, 3; Washington, 0. Stuyvesant, 3; Baltimore, 0.

Harriet Walton, Virginia, was elected vice president of the National Field Hockey Association following the tournament.

Commission Sets Another Hearing On Fight Report

Outside of setting a date for another hearing, yesterday's meeting of the District Boxing Commission, called because of a report that the Federation of Business Men's Association was investigating local boxing, accomplished nothing in the way of fact-finding.

With two members of the federation and the three-man boxing commission in attendence and the meeting getting nowhere, it was decided to call another hearing on Tuesday, December 18, at the boxing commission office in the Municipal Building.

Yesterday's session was attended by Claude W. Owen, Tom Morgan and Clarence Talley of the boxing commission; Arthur Carroll and Max Schwartz of the business men's federation; Referee Charlie Reynolds, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn of the Liberty Athletic Club, Dr. Leon Gordon of the commission staff and two boxing writers.

Hurricanes Given Bid Over L. S. U.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 3 (AP).—A scrappy University of Miami eleven that jumped from past mediocrity into the limelight as the "Cinderalel team" of the South, was chosen unanimously today to play against the Holy Cross Crusaders in the Orange Bowl game January 1.

Immediately a wild celebration erupted in downtown Miami and on the university compus in neargy Coral Gables as word spread that the hometowners had won the bid over the No. 2 choice, Louisiana State University's Bayou Tigers.

It will be Miami's first appearance in the Orange Bowl since the inaugural in 1935, when the Hurricanes lost to Bucknell, 26-0. For Holy Cross, it will be the first bowl game of any kind.

Once beaten in a 27-21 thriller by Georgia and once tied, 13-13, by South Carolina, the Hurricanes started off the season with mostly inexperienced freshmen, but they came through a hard schedule with eight wins and 198 points to their opponents 93.

The clincher game for the Hurricanes came last Friday when the 'Canes, sparked by Fullback Harry Ghaul, the South's leading scorer, trampled Auburn 33-7.

Holy Cross' record is slightly more impressive, with clean-cut victories over Dartmouth, Yale, Brown and Boston College, and only a single black mark against its record—a 14-6 trimming from Temple.

Grid Injuries Dampen Terp Court Hopes

Maryland's football finale last Saturday against University of South Carolina in Columbia may have put quite a dent in the Terps' early basketball hopes this year.

Don Gleasner, spectacular football end, who is reported even more shifty on a cage court, came up with a sprained ankle and Bill (Red) Poling, brilliant triple-threat halfback and another good basketball player, received a slightly separated shoulder as a result of the South Carolina game.

Maryland's cage skipper, Burton Shipley, reported yesterday that both boys will not be able to practice for at least 10 days and "won't be any good to us until Christmas."

Still another, Vic Turyn, regular grid quarterback, who has been out of action for the Terps' final three games because of influenza, may miss a lot of basketball.

A point of interest in the South Carolina game was the fact that Hammerin' Hank Bonk, agile fullback, broke a cartilage over his ribs on the opening kickoff and went on to score the Terps' first touchdown in the second period, end emerge third leading scorer in the Southern Conference with 49 points.

Bainbridge Back Tops State Scorers

Baltimore, Dec. 3 (AP).—Don Garlin, speedy Bainbridge halfback who scored three touchdowns as the Commodores defeated Oceana, Va., Naval Air Station Sunday, took individual Maryland football scoring honors of the season by boosting his total to 54 points.

He displaced last week's leader, Fullback George Mullinix of Johns Hopkins, who had 50 points.

The leaders:

Name, Team	P	TD	PAT	TP
Garlin, Bainbridge	Back	9	0	54
Mullinix, Hopkins	Back	8	1	50
Bonk, Maryland	Back	8	1	49

VMI's Chewning Is Conference High Scorer, Terps' Bonk Third

Richmond, Va., Dec. 3 (AP).—Players on two Virginia teams scampered off with first and second places in the individual scoring performances by players on Southern Conference teams.

High point man with the regular season for all teams in the conference complete is Lynn Chewning, VMI backfield speedster, who scored 10 touchdowns in six games and compiled 60 points. Following the VMI star is Tommy Korczowski, William and Mary left halfback, who has a season total of 54 points in six games.

Both teams played nine games. Six of William and Mary's were conference contests and five of VMI's were against loop opponents. The Keydets and the Tribe finished their seasons November 22 and the only scorers who had a chance to overhaul Chewning and Korczowski were Dutch Brembs of South Carolina, Harry Bonk and Bill Poling of Maryland.

Bonk Scored Saturday

These potential threats failed to materialize, however ,and Maryland concluded its season Saturday at Columbia, S. C., against a Gamecock team which threatened to win the game in the final period. Maryland shut off the rally in time to come off with a 19-13 victory and its third Southern Conference win of the season.

Clemson and Wake Forest brought their seasons to a close at Clemson, S. C., but it was all the Deacons could do to crowd across two touchdowns in the final period to win, 13 to 6. It was the first lass of the season for Clemson although they were tied once.

One other conference team played Saturday, North Carolina defeating Univesity of Virginia at Chapel Hill, N. C., 27-18, in a battle which saw the Virginians lose their second consecutive game after being undefeated in 14 contests.

The pickings were meager Saturday for Brembs and Poling with the former player only making one point for South Carolina and Poling failing to score. Bonk fared a little better, however, and got one touchdown to bring his season total to 49 points. Brembs' stands at 45 and Poling's at 43 .

Sacrinty Scored Twice

Saturday saw a newcomer to the scoring ranks move up into the better-than-40-points section. Nick Sacrinty drove across the goal line twice to add 12 points to his previous total of 30 made in three games with Wake Forest prior to the Clemson tussle.

Others among the leading scorers included George Clark who left Duke some weeks ago after being commissioned in the Navy. Clark had scored 42 points in the time he played with the Blue Devils. Bob Thomason of VMI had 38 points and Howard Turner of North Carolina State 36.

Rock Brinkley of Wake Forest led the scorers last year with a score of 78 points made in eight games. A William and Mary player took second place in 1944, however, when Jack Bruce wound up the season with 66.

Rumors to Clip Chandler's Powers Over Minors Afoot

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 3 (AP).—Baseball's overworked rumor factory put on a swing shift today churning reports of all kinds of ivory deals and loud whispers of a move afoot a clip the game's high commissioner of some of his powers over the minors.

Although the annual conclave of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues—known to the trade as the minors— doesn't open until Wednesday, the lobby-sitters' advance guard already was holding things down so capably there was no danger of the lobbies blowing away. And these are some of the things they were kicking around:

1. The revised major-minor league agreement, which is to come up for discussion—if not action—during the meeting may make the National Association president, rather than the commissioner, the "supreme court" for all differences in the minors.

2. The commissioner's power to toss out any legislation he considers "detrimental to baseball"—one of the late Judge K. M. Landis' handiest autocratic gadgets—may be erased from baseball law by an amendment slated to come before the meetings. This is one of 51 amendments to be chewed up during the get-together.

3. Baseball's postwar reconversion already was in full swing, with 19 new minor leagues already on the lists and qualified since the end of the season. Added to the dozen which operated last season, this gives the National Association 31 for the 1946 campaign, and L. H. Addington, the association's promotion director, said another six or eight more are "cooking on the stove."

4. Virtually every major league club is here to expand its farm system. The Cleveland Indians expect to add four or five more clubs during the meetings, according to General Manager Roger Peckinpaugh. Carl Hubbell, the New York Giants' chief "agriculturalist," is figuring on 13 farms in '46. The Phillies, who had affiliations with five minor league clubs in '45, already have added a number, among them Americus (Ga.) in the reorganized Eastern Shore League and Schenectady (N. Y.) in the returning Canadian-American loop.

5. Like the weather, everybody was taking about player deals, but no one was doing much about them, although every club will be overloaded with returning service men.

Steve O'Neill, manager of the world champion Detroit Tigers was in a number of huddles. But he explained that "while we're not particularly interested in any players, we're willing to make any deal that could better us."

All signs point to some lively jive over the suggestions for shaving off some of the commissioner's powers, both in the agreement revision and the amendments to come before the convention.

Another amendment that figures to make it pretty warm for December is the plan of the American Association, International League and Pacific Coast League to move up from AA to AAA classification. The Southern Association, advancing from A-1 to AA, doesn't like the prospect of losing the company and is prepared to toss a punch or two toward stopping the advance.

Total Victory Just That at Charles Town

Spanish Uhl Gives Way to 6-Year-Old

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 3—Miss Adrian Valentine's Total Victory, winner of more than $15,000 in purses this year, was a going-away winner of the Jefferson Purse, outstanding event on the Monday program of the Charles Town Jockey Club. The five-year-old son of Apprehension forged to the finish line 2½ lengths ahead of Mrs. J. Goodwin's Spanish Uhl. Two lengths farther back came G H. Ballou's Merrie Shot to be third in a field of eight.

Total Victory, ridden by Jockey Carson Kirk, found the heavy deep track to his liking and was clocked at 1:31 2-5 for the seven furlongs. The winner, in making it 10 victories in 20 tries, paid a $5 mutuel in the favorite role.

Kirk rode a confident race on Total Victory. He allowed the big horse to settle into stride as Chat Hopkins and Spanish Uhl fought it out for the lead. Chat Hopkins faded and Spanish Uhl took definite command. In the final drive, Total Victory wore down the pacemaker and was opening daylight at the end.

Walter Haight Last, No Less

Spanish Uhl held on gamely to be second ahead of the closing bid of Merrie Shot. Walter Haight was in last position at the start and maintained that position with vigor throughout the running.

A favorite and a long shot combined to produce a $189.40 pay-off Rosa Azteca won the first race at on the daily double. W. C. Bell's $3.80 and L. Seay's On the Wane took the second at $66.00.

City Officials Hit Small U. S. Aid to District

Failure of the Federal Government to increase its annual six million dollar payment toward District expenses was deplored yesterday at the annual conference of the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers.

The institute, which opened a three-day meeting at the Statler Hotel, also heard a plea for real "home rule" for municipalities—a government that would be free of either Federal or State interference.

A report submitted by John F. Evans, city counsel of Peterson, N. J., pointed out that many cities are now "in dire financial straits" because of extensive tax exempt Federal property in their jurisdiction.

Payments Kept Down

"In the District of Columbia," said the report, "a slight contribution is now made by the Federal Government because of the large holdings of Federal property. This lump su mpayment has not been increased even though war time acquisitions of Federal property have increased this Federal ownership in the District, and in other cities no lump sum payment of any kind is received. This situation is so unfair as to require no argument to prove that it should be corrected at once. The Federal Government has recognized its oblization in the District so should do full justice there and throughout the Nation."

One recent estimate, the report pointed out, placed the revenue loss to municipalities from Federal holdings at 80 million dollars a year.

In Lieu of Taxes

A resolution before the conference appeals to Congress to require payments in lieu of taxes on all properties of the United States and its agencies.

Institute President Fred T. Van Liew, city solicitor of Des Moines, Iowa, in a 10 point "Bill of Rights for Cities in a Triple Form of Government," called for genuine "home rule" for municipalities.

While specific mention was not made of the District's voteless status, or the legislation of Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) to grant it "home rule" through an elected council-city manager form of government, Liew's "Bill of Rights" declared:

"Before cities can ever be said to be on a basis of full community freedom with the States we should have home rule, which would give the citizens the right to rule their cities as they see fit without interference from Federal or State authorities, except in affairs wholly and exclusively outside of the community interests of cities."

Building Program Told

Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator, outlined the Government's big post-war public building and highway aid programs.

He pointed out it is planned to spend 193 million dollars on new Government buildings in the District, and about the same amount on projects throughout the country.

The 500-million-dollar a year Federal highway aid program, he explained, for the first time, will be used to construct main arteries through cities which have long been bottlenecks in the free movement of interstate traffic.

Will Not By-Pass Cities

These highways, he said, will not by-pass the cities, since studies indicated that between 85 and 95 per cent of traffic approaching a city wants to enter it.

Representative Albert Rains (D., Ala.), pleaded with the city officials to take more interest in legislation before Congress, and "lobby" just as vigorously as paid representatives of big business.

President Truman sent a message congratulating the institute for the "prominent and effective part" it played in the war effort.

A reception at the Mayflower Hotel closed the first day's activities. Host was Richmond B. Keech, former District Corporation Counsel, and now as assistant to Mr. Truman.

Peggy Joyce Quaking Bride, Sulfa, Not Fear

New York, Dec. 3 (INS).—Peggy Hopkins Joyce, the durable blonde, shook like a leaf when she stood up in Judge Ferdinand Pecora's chambers to be married today—but not from fright. Sulfa drugs, taken to ward off the flu, palsied Peggy.

Her fifth husband, British-born Anthony Easton, 38, was divorced last month. Peggy, who said she was 39, has three divorces—"all in my favor"—and one annulment.

Corsaged, bejeweled and beminked, Peggy brought along Dennis Mahoney, a detective, to guard the furs and gems, and also on account of he has been a witness at all her other weddings.

In fact, he almost gave the bride away by reminiscing. He reminisced that he was present when she married her fourth husband, Count Gosta Morner of Sweden, in Chicago 19 years ago. Before that, she was married to Everett Archer (when she was 15), Sherburne Hopkins and Stanley Joyce.

Peggy wanted to turn down the lights in the judge's chamber, but the judge said nix. "Everyone wants to look at the beautiful bride," he said gallantly.

After the ceremony Paggy looked around and said, "Well, who kisses whom?"

Judge Pecora made a line plunge but was ruled offside by the bridegroom.

City Clerk Murray Stand expedited a 25-hour waiver for Peggy on her affidavit that she was ill and had been ordered by her doctor to fly to California immediately.

The bridegroom lives in Palm Springs.

Just what the doctor ordered.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 26, Sole Support of Widowed Mother, Sees Spinster Fate Ahead Because Mother Clings to Her Company, Scaring Beaux Away

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 26 years old and since the death of my father I live with my mother and an unmarried aunt. The latter is my father's sister. I am my mother's sole support and we have always been very compatible. My aunt is in very poor health and seldom goes out, so mother clings to me for companionship.

She even goes with me to service clubs and other young peoples' gatherings. I have met some interesting boys but when they find out that I am so well chaperoned they never take me home or ask for a date. I have tried several times to gently hint to mother that I am a grown woman now and capable of taking care of myself; and also, that it is time I had a boy friend.

They Share Aunt's Home

HOWEVER, she apparently cannot understand that boys do not like to entertain her, too. What I mean is, they hesitate to notice me because she is around. I have thought several times of moving away from home and getting a room with a girl friend. But I really can't do it and leave mother; for although my aunt could support her financially, I do not think it would be right to expect that of her, since they are not kin.

What can I do? Am I to accept things as they are and be content with an old maid's life? Or is there a better solution of my problem? I will appreciate your advice. E. N.

Has She Courage Of Desperation?

DEAR E. N.: Confronted with a problem like this, one's first impulse is to throw up one's hands in half-despair, recognizing the truth of Hamlet's statement that situations, "desperate grown, by desperate appliance are relieved, or not at all."

Given your magnanimous dutiful temperament, your superior faculty of seeing things in the round and taking the other fellows feelings and/or rights into account, your disposition to carry the Old Man of the Sea on your back rather than shift that unjust load to somebody else, and given a marked degree of compatibility with your mother, you are involved in a terrible dilemma, as a result of her infantile—or is it devouring?—dependency upon your companionship.

There can be no doubt that you are morally entitled to lead a woman's life quite apart from her; and that you would be altogether justified in refusing to let her be your social shadow—by having done with gentle hints and putting your foot down firmly about it. Yet if you took that course, possibly she would react so abominably—in a woefully suffering, "How can you do this to me?" sort of way—that you would feel too depressed to take much profit from your declaration of independence.

This Is Tussle With a Dragon

THAT'S the way these possessive mothers operate to gobble up their children's lives: they cut their hearts to ribbons if they try to escape. And rare indeed is the son or daughter thus emmeshed or so bedevilled who develops the courage of conviction to launch the fight for freedom, and shows the emotional stamina to see it through with himself the winner—letting the fur fly as it will, and valiantly refusing to let parental heroics or divided, anguished personal sentiments turn him back.

Only your mother's lazy, clinging selfishness creates a problem here. If she is able to keep your social pace, she has energy enough to hold a job, and thus be at least partially self-supporting and in sufficient contact with life to make her own friends—instead of playing skeleton at the feast amongst yours. Or, if it can be argued that your aunt's ill health requires your mother to stay home, as housekeeper, etc., then your aunt owes her support in return for service—which leaves you free to live apart if you like, giving your mother whatever allowance you can afford as practical proof of normal fealty.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Children's Crusade

JUST as you are about to give up hope for the country and the planet, you find there are a surprising number of persons plugging along at little things that are the shining "good deeds in a naughty world." You even find that while most (presumable) adults are hurling insults at each other across national boundary lines, something is being done to build friendship among the world's children.

The Girl Scouts, for example, have been going along quietly making friends and influencing people abroad through the bags of trinkets (needles, pins, combs, etc.) they send to girls of their age in 10 European countries.

Now throughout the United States and Canada, younger children are giving an answer to Hitler's book burning, also making future friends for themselves, by sending abroad "treasure chests" of children's books. Mothers are finding this movement a valuable antidote to the "gimme" upbringing of the young, which expresses itself so vociferously at the Christmas season.

Sponsors of the "Treasure Chest" movement believe in reaching the human mind early. Knowing how the pictures, jingles and ideas of the first story book go with a child through life, they are emphasizing the illustrated books for younger children in chest contributions. At first, picture books with little text were sent abroad. But the demand for books with more reading matter is growing. Children in Europe are studying English in their schools and beginning to read and speak it to a surprising degree.

A "treasure chest," which may be assembled by a group of children in a school, church, or community, holds from 30 to 100 books. These are selected from a list made and constantly revised by the Book Committee of the Women's Council for Postwar Europe, which has headquarters at 366 Madison ave., New York, and which will soon start "treasure chest" activities in Washington. Madam Ninon Tallon, French theater director, who came to this country in 1941, is the founder. A niece of Eduard Herriot, French statesman, she was eager to carry on in some way his activities after the First World War in helping establish free American libraries in devastated parts of France.

On the chest's inside cover is a picture of a rainbow and this friendly greeting from Madam Tallon: "One American boy said—'God made the rainbow go around the world—all the boys and girls everywhere see it from below.' After a storm a rainbow appears. After the storm of war, may it long bring peace to all children everywhere."

A typical chest might contain an illustrated children's dictionary, a geography of America, and standard children's books of folk and fairy tales, nature and science, poetry and song, and of American background. Included would be a scrapbook containing snapshots, drawings and letters telling about the senders. A blank scrapbook would be included so that the children receiving the chest might send return information about themselves. By this means correspondence might begin.

SHIPMENT of chests is handled by the United States Interim International Information. Each chest goes to a center, a town, or a village designated by the senders. Voluntary social workers in foreign countries attend to the distribution. Ultimately the Book Committee hopes to employ trained field workers abroad to open the chests and read and interpret the books.

Chests are sent only to countries requesting them. So far they have gone to most European countries, to Soviet Russia, China and the Philippines. Younger Philippine children, who knew only Japanese occupation, got their first knowledge of America through the colorful, illustrated books that came in the chests. All through Europe children who have been shut off from knowledge of the world, either by Fascist domination or poverty, are learning of America through these gifts.

They are also sharing in the delights of the storybook art and illustration that has made America a children's book paradise. Used books in good condition are accepted for the chests, thus solving the problems of many a mother whose offspring have been surfeited with gifts in this line. However, many children use their savings to select and buy bright and shining new books for their prospective friends abroad.

Dorothy Kraus, Fred Morthorst Exchange Vows

In the church of St. Thomas the Apostle Saturday at 9 a. m., Miss Dorothy Marie Kraus became the bride of Fred P. Morthorst, with the Rev. Joseph Moran officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Kraus, Nauvoo, Ill., and Mr. Morthorst is son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Morthorst, Washington.

William G. Talbot gave the bride in marriage. She was attired in white satin, designed with fitted bodice and full gathered skirt. Her finger-tip veil of illusion was edged in Belgian lace and held with a tiara of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of carnations.

Miss Dorothy O'Quest, maid of honor, wore a frock of pink lace, shoulder-length net veil and carried pink carnations. Lieut. Richard Lucht served as best man.

A reception followed at the Wardman Park Hotel, where the mother of the bride received. She was attired in a black dress with blue and fuchsia top. Mrs. Morthorst, mother of the bridegroom, was costumed in a black frock with rase bodice. Both wore carnation corsages.

The bridegroom attended Benjamin Franklin University and is an employe of The Washington Post.

China Tiffin Group Meets For Luncheon

"China to Me" might well be the motto of the women who met for luncheon yesterday at the Cathay restaurant. Members of the China Tiffin Club—their number includes wives of admirals, generals, State Department officials, scientists, bankers, businessmen—all drawn together by the intangible bond of having lived in the Far East.

A small group of "old China hands" formed the Tiffin Club about a year ago. Members get together the first Monday of each month for a real Chinese tiffin. Knives, forks and spoons are scorned as everyone adeptly wields chopsticks to eat Chinese delicacies.

Special guests yesterday were two women whose husbands have been making history in China—Mrs. Albert C. Wedemeyer, wife of the United States commander in China, and Mrs. Joseph W. Stilwell, wife of the Tenth Army commander. Also manipulating chopsticks were Mrs. Nelson Johnson, wife of the former American Ambassador to China; Mrs. DeWitt Peck, wife of the assistant commandant of the Marine Corps; Mrs. William Glassford, wife of Admiral Glassford; Mrs. Milton Miles, wife of Admiral Miles; Mrs. Roger Wolcott, whose husband is with the American Military Mission in Shanghai.

Chatting with Mrs. J. A. Ramsey, widow of Colonel Ramsey, was Mrs. Fred Gilbert, wearing a four-star pin—one star for her husband, Colonel Gilbert, who's stationed in Washington, and one for each of her three sons in Antwerp, San Francisco and Japan, respectively.

Presiding at the luncheon was Mrs. Ralph A. Schilling, who announced plans for the club's Christmas tea dance to be held at the United Nations Club, Sunday, December 23.

McCanns Entertain At Cocktail Party

Sparkling conversation in French and English, rare French champagnes, the chic of Parisian dress and the usual warmth of Franco-American relations highlighted the cocktail party Saturday night given by Mr. and Mrs. James L. McCann, Paris and Washington, in their Tilden Gardens apartment.

Guest of honor was Jack Hunter, economic expert with the Foreign Service Department, who leaves today for Paris.

Assisting the McCanns was their son, Howard Allen, who has received his discharge from the Army after two years' service with the OSS in Algeria and France.

A Good Move

Admitting that an end table lamp looks its decorative best when centered toward the back of the table, still lighting experts believe this is a good move in the interest of eyesight protection: Bring the lamp close to you when reading, sewing or doing other eye work. The closer to your work a lamp is placed, the better the see-ability and the more light you get for your money.

Mrs. Vogel Is Hostess

Mrs. Martin Vogel entertained at luncheon yesterday—one of a series—at her home on Woodland dr. as a welcome back for her niece, Mrs. Clayton Adams, who with General Adams, is visiting her from Los Angeles for several weeks.

Other guests were Senora de Vallarino, wife of the Ambassador of Panama; Mrs. Charles O. Bunker, Mrs. Maury Maverick, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Charles Hurd, Mrs. Blake Clarke, Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, Miss Bertha Joseph, Miss Lydia Langer and Mrs. John Paterson.

Late Banking Hours in D. C. Te Be Quitted

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington banks will discontinue late Thursday hours in the near future, it was indicated yesterday.

The exact date for suspension of 6:30 closing on Thursdays will be announced after a survey is completed by the District Bankers Association on the amount of business being done during the Thursday period. Except for a few instances, most banks reportedly show quiet lobbies in the extra period.

Main reason for keeping open late Thursday has been removed with suspension of night shopping hours that day by leading department stores. Since March, 1942, the banks have been on the extra schedule as a convenience for Government workers who were on a 48-hour week. The majority of Federal workers are now back to a 40-hour week and many bankers feel that the late Thursday hours are an unnecessary burden on their employes.
